WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines
| usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
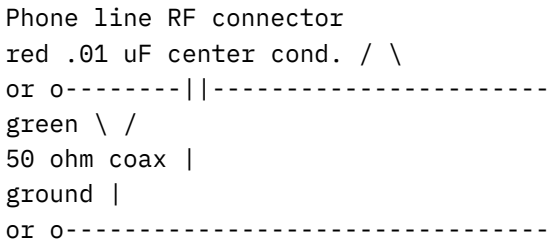
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

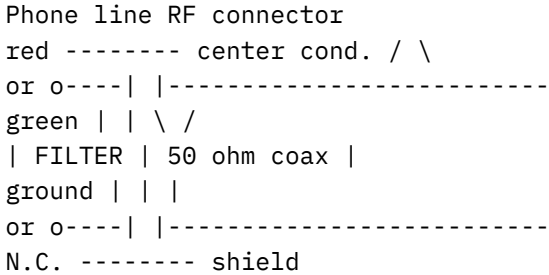
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit

FILTER PLANS

Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }

-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

chassis ground

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

it comes from here, the nazi big lie theory.

follow the principle that when one lies, one should lie big, and stick to it. They keep up their lies, even at the risk of looking ridiculous.

never allow the public to cool off; never admit a fault or wrong; never concede that there may be some good in your enemy; never leave room for alternatives; never accept blame; concentrate on one enemy at a time and blame him for everything that goes wrong; people will believe a big lie sooner than a little one; and if you repeat it frequently enough people will sooner or later believe it.

The key-word here is blackwhite. Like so many Newspeak words, this word has two mutually contradictory meanings. Applied to an opponent, it means the habit of impudently claiming that black is white, in contradiction of the plain facts."[6]
"To tell deliberate lies while genuinely believing in them, to forget any fact that has become inconvenient, and then when it becomes necessary again, to draw it back from oblivion for just so long as it is needed...

If you tell a lie that's big enough, and you tell it often enough, people will believe you are telling the truth, even when what you are saying is total crap.

remember, you can always tell what is on the mind of a conservative, its when they accuse others of what they themselves are thinking. they are fascists, and they are projecting.

However, in the next sections I will document the word "privatization" in works published in the 1930s and early 1940s on German economic policy, and its recurrence in the 1950s and 1960s. One major work was Maxine Yaple Sweezy's (1941) The Structure of the Nazi Economy. Sweezy stated that industrialists supported Hitler's accession to power and his economic policies: "In return for business assistance, the Nazis hastened to give evidence of their good will by restoring to private capitalism a number of monopolies held or controlled by the state" (p. 27). This policy implied a large-scale program by which "the government transferred ownership to private hands" (p. 28). One of the main objectives for this policy was to stimulate the propensity to save, since a war economy required low levels of private consumption. High levels of savings were thought to depend on inequality of income, which would be increased by inequality of wealth. This, according to Sweezy (p. 28), "was thus secured by 'reprivatization'. . . . The practical significance of the transference of government enterprises into private hands was thus that the capitalist class continued to serve as a vessel for the accumulation of income. Profit-making and the return of property to private hands, moreover, have assisted the consolidation of Nazi party power."

WHO IS Maxine Yaple Sweezy - wife of the distinguished Marxist economist Paul Marlor Sweezy?

Paul M. Sweezy was a sponsor of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace which ran from March 25 - 27, 1949 in New York City.
It was arranged by a Communist Party USA front organization known as the National Council of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions.
The conference was a follow-up to a similar gathering, the strongly anti-America, pro-Soviet World Congress of Intellectuals which was held in Poland, August 25 - 28, 1948.

http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Paul_M._Sweezy

Paul Marlor Sweezy was a Marxist author and the co-founder (with Leo Huberman) and longtime editor of the Marxian “independent socialist” magazine Monthly Review.

Sweezy spent a year at the Fabian socialist London School of Economics. He went to Europe in hopes of studying under Austrian free-market economist Friedrich von Hayek but fell, instead, under the spell of socialist professor Harold Laski, of Leon Trotsky’s newly translated History of the Russian Revolution, and of young leftwing teacher Joan Robinson (who later became a Maoist Marxist and a formative influence on Arianna Huffington). Sweezy emerged, in his own description, “a convinced but very ignorant Marxist.”

The Europeans have exposed your NAZI "teeth in gum" relationship with the Communist Party:

http://www.SovietStory.com

As SocialistWorker.org (NAZI) admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews
http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

The Origins of the Term "Privatization"

Michael Perelman on the origins of the term "privatization." I first met Michael many, many years ago as an undergraduate at CSU Chico where he was teaching:

The Nazi Heritage of Privatization, by Michael Perelman: Privatization is very popular among laissez-faire types today. The recent issue of the Journal of Economic Perspectives offers a ... tale in which the term privatization is falsely credited to Peter Drucker. In fact, Nazis coined the term. Their intent was to skew the distribution of income toward the rich, with the objective of reducing consumption. After all, the rich have a lower marginal propensity to consume.

The term seems to have been first introduced into academic social science by Maxine Yaple Sweezy, wife of the distinguished Marxist economist, Paul Sweezy.

Bel, Germa'. 2006. ""The Coining of "Privatization" and Germany's National Socialist Party." Journal of Economic Perspectives, 20: 3 (Summer): pp. 187-94 [author web page link]: 187-8: "The standard story on the coining of "privatization" reports that in 1969 Peter Drucker used the term "reprivatization" in the sense that economists understand it today. In The Age of Discontinuity (1969, p. 229), Drucker makes a negative appraisal on the managerial capabilities of the public sector: "Government is a poor manager …. It has no choice but to be 'bureaucratic.'" Drucker's (p. 233) analysis of how government works leads him to what he takes as "the main lesson of the last fifty years: the government is not a doer." Thus, Drucker (p. 234) proposed adopting a "systematic policy of using the other, the nongovernmental institutions of the society of organizations, for the actual 'doing,' i.e., for performance, operations, execution. Such a policy might be called 'reprivatization.'" Drucker referred to "reprivatization" because he proposed giving back to the private sector executive responsibilities that had been private before the public sector took them over through nationalization and municipalization starting in the last decades of the nineteenth century."

189-90: "In the late 1930s and the early 1940s, a number of works were devoted to the analysis of economic policy in Germany under the rule of the National Socialist Party. One major work was Maxine Yaple Sweezy's (1941) The Structure of the Nazi Economy. Sweezy stated that industrialists supported Hitler's accession to power and his economic policies: "In return for business assistance, the Nazis hastened to give evidence of their good will by restoring to private capitalism a number of monopolies held or controlled by the state" (p. 27). This policy implied a large-scale program by which "the government transferred ownership to private hands" (p. 28). One of the main objectives for this policy was to stimulate the propensity to save, since a war economy required low levels of private consumption. High levels of savings were thought to depend on inequality of income, which would be increased by inequality of wealth. This, according to Sweezy (p. 28), "was thus secured by 'reprivatization' …. The practical significance of the transference of government enterprises into private hands was thus that the capitalist class continued to serve as a vessel for the accumulation of income. Profit-making and the return of property to private hands, moreover, have assisted the consolidation of Nazi party power." Sweezy (p. 30) again uses the concept when giving concrete examples of transference of government ownership to private hands: "The United Steel Trust is an outstanding example of 'reprivatization.'" This may be the first use of the term "reprivatization" in the academic literature in English, at least within the domain of the social sciences."

192-3: "The primary modern argument against privatization is that it only enriches and entrenches business and political elites, without benefiting consumers or taxpayers. The discussion here suggests a rich historical irony: these modern arguments against privatization are strikingly similar to the arguments made in favor of privatization in Germany in the 1930s. As Sweezy (1941) and Merlin (1943) explicitly point out, German privatization of the 1930s was intended to benefit the wealthiest sectors and enhance the economic position and political support of the elite. Of course, this historical connection does not prove that privatization is always a sound or an unsound policy, only that the effects of privatization may depend considerably on the political, social and economic contexts. German privatization in the 1930s differed from the privatization of Volkswagen in the 1950s, and both of these situations differ from, say, the British privatizations of the 1980s, the Russian privatizations of the 1990s, or the privatizations across Latin America over the last two decades."

Typical right wing moron who doesn't have a clue as to what fascism is.

From Benito Mussolini, the Father of Fascism:

"...Fascism [is] the complete opposite ofï¿½Marxian Socialism"

"...given that the nineteenth century was the century of Socialism, of Liberalism, and of Democracy, it does not necessarily follow that the twentieth century must also be a century of Socialism, Liberalism and Democracy: political doctrines pass, but humanity remains, and it may rather be expected that this will be a century of authority...a century of Fascism."

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
26 March - 01 April 2012

Solar activity was at mostly low levels during the period. Region 1451 (N17, L=306, class/area Cro/20 on 30 March), which is thought to be old Region 1429, produced a C7 x-ray event on 29 March, the largest event of the period. No other significant flares or associated CMEs occurred.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit ranged between normal and moderate levels off and on throughout the period.

Geomagnetic field activity began the period at quiet levels on 26 March and the first half of 27 March. Beginning around 0900 UTC on 27 March, conditions increased to unsettled levels over the next 12 hours, as the result of a sustained period of southward Bz near
-13nT. Shortly prior to 1800 UTC, a transition in polarity (SSBC) was observed at the onset of weak Coronal Hole (CH) high speed stream, with the NOAA planetary network of ground magnetometers recording active levels over the next 9 hours so, ending at 0600 UTC on 28 March. Individual high latitude stations recorded minor storm levels simultaneously. From midday 28 March through the end of the period on 01 April, geomagnetic activity remained at quiet levels.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
02 April - 28 April 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels throughout the period with a slight chance for M-class flare activity.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels from 02 April through 13 April. Flux values are forecast to increase to high levels on 14 April and persist through 18 April, as the result of CH high speed stream effects. Flux values are expected to return to normal and moderate levels on 19 April, and remain so through the duration of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period at mostly quiet conditions and remain so through 03 April. On 04 April, quiet to unsettled conditions are expected as a small positive polarity CH is expected to move into a favorable position for a day or so. Predominately quiet conditions are expected again from 05 -10 April. On 11 April, high speed stream effects from recurrent negative polarity CH are forecast to bring unsettled and active conditions at mid latitudes and possible minor storm levels at high latitudes. This activity is expected to persist for 3 to 4 days. From 15 April through 23 April, conditions are expected to return to predominately quiet levels. A recurrent positive polarity CH is anticipated on 24 - 25 April, and is expected to increase activity to unsettled conditions. Mostly quiet geomagnetic conditions are expected from 26 April through the end of the period.

One of the oldest maritime traditions is the act of rendering aid.
Regardless of national politics, regardless of boundary. Regardless of service, purpose or orders, aid, if it can be rendered is rendered.

It was pretty common during the wars that vessels and crews of enemy combatants rendered aid to crews on vessels of the enemy while in distress at sea.

It does give us hope.

The Saif Ali khan's movie Agent Gopi released on March 23rd. Kareena Kapoor is the heroin.

Is she any relation to Yam Kapoor?

She is looking hot in this film.
Saif also looking good in agent character. Sriram is the director for this movie.
Definitely this agent vinod movie will give big hit to Saif Ali khan.

AS-109 ---> The RT9K/p expedition to Zhuravlinyy Island (AS-109) [425DXN 1091] has been cancelled. The ice is at the same time too thin for the team to use their snowmobiles, and still too thick for a boat to reach the island. [TNX DX World]

HK0NA QSL UPDATE ---> The cards have been designed, the order has gone to the printer and the HK0NA QSL card processing should start sometime in May-June. "This will be an enormous enterprise and will take time to process", N2OO says. "QSL cards will not be mailed all at one time. We are pre-processing direct OQRS requests first. Direct mail will be next". Updates will be posted to www.sjdxa.org/hk0na.htm

HOLYLAND CONTEST ---> This year's event (the 21st edition) will be held on 20-21 April, from 21 UTC to 21 UTC. Complete rules can be found on the Israel Amateur Radio Club's website (www.iarc.org).

PY0S ---> Cesar, PY2YP reports he has uploaded a few more St. Peter and St. Paul Rocks logs to LoTW and to the log search on the dedicated page at www.py2yp.com [425DXN 1091]: PW0S (February 2001), ZY0SAT (March-April 2001, satellite QSO still pending), ZY0SAT (February-March 2002), ZW0S (April, September and December 2003) and PY0S/PS7JN (November-December 2004, September 2005, January-February 2006). He is now working on paper logs for PY0SJ, PY0SP, PY0ZSA, PY0ZSB & PY0ZSC (September-October 1982) and PY0SK & PY0SR (May 1991). Cesar is also trying to get the logs for 1978 and 1987.

TOP LISTS ---> The latest Topband, Topmode and Toplist listings are now available at www.425dxn.org/awards/toplist/index.html. QSOs confirmed through LoTW or included in on-line logs are eligible for listing. Send your scores, as well as any request for further information, to Erminio Pandocchi I2EOW (i2eow[@]fastwebnet.it).

+ SILENT KEY + Fred Maia (W5YI), a leading Amateur Radio journalist for nearly 35 years and a pioneer of the volunteer examining programme adopted by the FCC in 1984, passed away on 28 March at 76 years of age. In 1986 he founded The W5YI Group to develop, publish and sell amateur and commercial radio license study materials.

They have one giant non-directional antenna. If they put up a second shorter tower they could go directional at night and maybe go to 250 Watts!

http://fccinfo.com/CMDProEngine.php?sCurrentService=AM&tabSearchType=Appl&sAppIDNumber=1395853&sHours=N

They probably cover their COL well enough with the power they are running.
Weiser's a pretty small town, and most folks that live there are watching TV after local sunset (or in bed asleep).

KTRP Transmitter/Antenna is actually on the south-side of Payette; which is around 10 Miles south of Weiser. The real target audience are the many more Radio Listeners in 'metro' Boise, ID about 40 Miles to the South-East of the KTRP Transmitter/Antenna.

-info- KTRP-AM 1260 kHz Weiser {Boise} Idaho
http://radio-locator.com/cgi-bin/finder?call=KTRP&x=0&y=0&sr=Y&s=C

CFRN-AM is on 1260 kHz with 50KW but it is over 500 Miles to the North.

KBLY-AM 1260 kHz is nearby in Idaho Falls, ID; around 200 Miles to the East.

Liberal and open-ended interpretation of the Constitution has rendered it practically meaningless, opening the door to steady growth of the federal government and its inexorable encroachment in our lives over the last half century. The problems we are having today all originate here - Liberal Fascism.

We now use the internet to turn the spot light on the likes of ObaMa0:

http://AgendaDocumentary.com
http://BigGovernment.com/amarcus/2010/04/28/Americas-Progressive-Anarchy-tea-party/

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of
Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that

Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4758sBZLC5k

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fa1sj0gwnuQ

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

NAZI Origins of LIBERAL FASCISTS Global Warming - While this may sound odd to many who have bought into the Marxian propaganda over the years that the Nazis were right wing capitalistic extremists, Greens who signed up for the Nazi Party were actually very typical of the day. Between 60% and 70% of the German Greens were NAZI Party members, compared to only 10% of the population at large.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau's Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

"The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, 'this is mine,' and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society."

Added Rousseau: "How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to "liberal" causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither "liberal" nor "progressive," but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

1. Liberalism (Well Meaning, Nice Sounding, "Do-Gooder" Policies Always Doomed to Fail)

2. Liberal-Progressivism (The Drive for Social Improvement through Change and Promising Hope;
More Draconian Liberal Polices are Implemented to Transform The People into a New Society that

3. Liberal-Fascism (The Rise of the Party Leader over 'The Party' Ensuring the Unity and Uniformaty of 'The Party' and Enforcing The Will of 'The Party' Over the People.) The Party Leader will Cleanse 'The Party' of All those Who Are NOT of 'The Party'; and 'The Party' Will Cleanse the People of All Those Who Do NOT Support 'The Party' and The Party Leader. The Party Leader Now Has Complete and Total Power and Rules by the Force of His Iron Will.

Liberty Net: March 31, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/04/liberty-net-march-31-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

IONOSPHERIC CONDITIONS were turbulent and static levels were Summer-like in their intensity this week, but the efficient antennas of the Liberty Netï¿½s keystone stations made the dialogue as interesting and lively as ever. On the air since 1974, the Liberty Net is amateur radioï¿½s oldest current events discussion net.

Here are some of the issues discussed and debated during this weekï¿½s Liberty Net:

ï¿½ The Africanization of American life is reaching Idiocratic proportions: Illinois state representative Bobby Rush recently wore a ï¿½hoodieï¿½ to the legislative chamber and complained loudly about the shooting of Trayvon Martin in faraway Florida, while at the same time there were some 13 shootings in his own district, with two confirmed dead so far. (18 minutes)

ï¿½ A young White boy in Missouri was recently attacked by a gang of Black thugs who poured gasoline on him and set him afire, all the while screaming racial abuse at him. Yet we hear nothing from Obama, nothing from Eric Holder, and nothing from the billionairesï¿½ media on that crime. (25 minutes)

ï¿½ The so-called BRIC countries ï¿½ Brazil, Russia, India, and China ï¿½ and their allies are now planning to create a new world currency to replace the dollar, and all without consulting the regime in Washington or its banker overlords. (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ Want to buy a gallon of high-test gasoline for 20 cents a gallon? Easy: Just pay with two silver dimes, which are worth about $2.29 each in the phony trading stamps that the Washington regime forces us to use for money. (1 hour 17 minutes)

ï¿½ Are agribusiness interests pushing regulators into forcing farmers to slaughter or destroy huge numbers of non-genetically-modified animals and plants? (1 hour 50 minutes)

ï¿½ Banks ï¿½ who made the real estate crash happen, which forced millions of home owners into foreclosure ï¿½ are now buying up many of the same ï¿½distressed propertiesï¿½ for eight to ten cents on the dollar. (2 hours 1 minute)

ï¿½ The collapse of the finance-capital system in Europe ï¿½ most recently in Greece, but soon to come in Spain and Portugal and other countries ï¿½ has nothing to do with the genetic or educational qualities of the people there, which are quite high indeed. But it has everything to do with the fact that creating money through debt at compound interest is an inherently unsustainable system, to say nothing of the fact that it is the greatest fraud and theft in all human history. (2 hours 14 minutes)

ï¿½ The Fox-watching ignoramuses who call themselves ï¿½conservativesï¿½ today pretend to be pro-freedom, but canï¿½t even see the contradiction in their near-worship of the Washington regimeï¿½s most bloated programs: the murder-and-invasion machine also known as the US military. (2 hours 40 minutes)

Donï¿½t be shy ï¿½ check in to amateur radioï¿½s historic Liberty Net every Saturday night ï¿½ on some clear frequency near (usually above) 3950 kHz SSB starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The net has to be frequency-agile to avoid receiving or causing interference. And check out our Internet feeds which can help you copy, and communicate with, weak stations.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

Neo-Nazis are currently conducting heavily armed patrols in and around Sanford, Florida and are "prepared" for violence in the case of a race riot. The patrols are to protect "white citizens in the area who are concerned for their safety" in the wake of the Trayvon Martin shooting last month, says Commander Jeff Schoep of the National Socialist Movement.

Ku Klux Klan Terrorist Arm of the Democratic Party

History shows that the Ku Klux Klan was the terrorist arm of the Democrat Party. This ugly fact about the Democrat Party is detailed in the book, A Short History of Reconstruction, (Harper & Row Publishers, Inc., 1990) by Dr. Eric Foner, the renown liberal historian who is the DeWitt Clinton Professor of History at Columbia University. As a further testament to his impeccable credentials, Professor Foner is only the second person to serve as president of the three major professional organizations: the Organization of American Historians, American Historical Association, and Society of American Historians.

Democrats in the last century did not hide their connections to the Ku Klux Klan. Georgia-born Democrat Nathan Bedford Forrest, a Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan wrote on page 21 of the September 1928 edition of the Klan's "The Kourier Magazine": "I have never voted for any man who was not a regular Democrat. My father … never voted for any man who was not a Democrat. My grandfather was …the head of the Ku Klux Klan in reconstruction days…. My great-grandfather was a life-long Democrat…. My great-great-grandfather was…one of the founders of the Democratic party."

Dr. Foner in his book explores the history of the origins of Ku Klux Klan and provides a chilling account of the atrocities committed by Democrats against Republicans, black and white.

On page 146 of his book, Professor Foner wrote: "Founded in 1866 as a Tennessee social club, the Ku Klux Klan spread into nearly every Southern state, launching a 'reign of terror' against Republican leaders black and white." Page 184 of his book contains the definitive statements: "In effect, the Klan was a military force serving the interests of the Democratic party, the planter class, and all those who desired the restoration of white supremacy. It aimed to destroy the Republican party's infrastructure, undermine the Reconstruction state, reestablish control of the black labor force,

Heartbreaking are Professor Foner's recitations of the horrific acts of terror inflicted by Democrats on black and white Republicans. Recounted on pages 184-185 of his book is one such act of terror: "Jack Dupree, a victim of a particularly brutal murder in Monroe County, Mississippi - assailants cut his throat and disemboweled him, all within sight of his wife, who had just given birth to twins - was 'president of a republican club' and known as a man who 'would speak his mind.'"

"White gangs roamed New Orleans, intimidating blacks and breaking up Republican meetings," wrote Dr. Foner on page 146 of his book. On page 186, he wrote: "An even more extensive 'reign of terror' engulfed Jackson, a plantation county in Florida's panhandle. 'That is where Satan has his seat,' remarked a black clergyman; all told over 150 persons were killed, among them black leaders and Jewish merchant Samuel Fleischman, resented for his Republican views and for dealing fairly with black customers."

Frederick Douglass (1817-1895) was one of the foremost leaders of the abolitionist movement which fought to end slavery within the United States in the decades prior to the Civil War. He eagerly attended the founding meeting of the republican party in 1854 and campaigned for its nominees.

Frederick Douglass served as an adviser to President Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War and fought for the adoption of constitutional amendments that guaranteed voting rights and other civil liberties for blacks. After the Civil War, Douglass realized that the war for citizenship had just begun when Democrat President Andrew Johnson proved to be a determined opponent of land redistribution and civil and political rights for former slaves. Douglass began the postwar era relying on the same themes that he preached in the antebellum years: economic self-reliance, political agitation, and coalition building. Douglass provided a powerful voice for human rights during this period of American history and is still revered today for his contributions against racial injustice.

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13

actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940's, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political "right," but of the "left"—that the basic issue is not "rich versus poor," but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms

BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Racist past haunts Florida town where Trayvon died
By Tom Brown | Reuters – 5 hrs ago

SANFORD, Florida (Reuters) - The year before Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier by becoming the first African American to play major league baseball, he fled the racist threats of townspeople in Sanford, Florida, where Trayvon Martin was shot 66 years later.
It was 1946 and Robinson arrived in this picturesque town in central Florida for spring training with a Brooklyn Dodgers farm team. He didn't stay long.
Robinson was forced to leave Sanford twice, according to Chris Lamb, a professor at the College of Charleston in South Carolina, who wrote a graphic account of Robinson's brush with 100 angry locals in a 2004 book.
The house where Robinson slept during his brief and furtive stay in Sanford still stands, but there is no historical plaque to record his troubled visit before going on to become a baseball hero and an icon of the U.S. civil rights movement.
"A specter of Jackie Robinson" haunts the city of 53,000 people to this day, said Lamb. "People want to forget it and it shouldn't be forgotten."
While those days of segregation are now relegated to history, racial tension persists in Sanford, rekindled of late by the February 26 shooting death of an unarmed black teenager, Trayvon Martin, at the hands of a white Hispanic neighborhood watch volunteer, George Zimmerman.
Calls for "Justice for Trayvon" have grown after prosecutors declined to charge Zimmerman, who says he acted in self defense. Protesters, led by prominent black civil rights activists, have demanded that Zimmerman be arrested.
"We've come from the plantation, from the outhouse to the White House. You can't shoot our children no more," the Rev. Al Sharpton told one recent protest rally in Miami.
Lawyers for Zimmerman say the case should not be viewed through a racial lens. "This case is not about racism, it's a case of self-defense," Craig Sonner, one of Zimmerman's attorneys, told Reuters, adding that the public should not rush to judgment. "When all the evidence comes out it will be seen by all that this case is not racially motivated."

Still, the case fueled resentment "that if you're black and you're shot, particularly by someone who's not black, that it is not viewed as seriously," said Sanford City Manager Norton Bonaparte, who is black.
"That's why some feel that Mr. Zimmerman was allowed to just go on his way while Mr. Martin went to a morgue. And certainly if it was reversed, and Zimmerman had been black, he would have been detained and arrested," he added.
MISTRUST RUNS DEEP
A special prosecutor appointed by Florida Governor Rick Scott is investigating the case to decide if charges are warranted. The Justice Department's civil rights division is also examining the killing for evidence of a possible hate crime.
As in many cities across America, black mistrust of the police and judicial officials in Sanford runs deep.
Last month, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) held two town hall meetings in Sanford where hundreds of black residents turned out to voice their concern over police conduct.
"They put these black boys in jail on all kinds of bogus charges," one woman speaker, Lela King, told a packed church.
"You can go from town to town, city to city, and you could pack churches like this with African Americans, explaining that this is just a part of their everyday life," said another speaker, landscaper Hannibal Duncan.
NAACP officials compiled details at those meetings of at least six incidents involving alleged police misconduct that they plan to turn over to the Justice Department for possible investigation, an NAACP spokesman said.
Sanford police said only two complaints about alleged misconduct or biased-based policing have been filed with the department since the start of 2010. A police spokesman said he is unaware of how both complaints were resolved.
"What took place (with Martin's shooting) ... was not typical for Sanford ... Sanford is a good community, a welcoming community," said Bonaparte.
A guide for visitors to historic Sanford, "Florida's Friendly City," presents a warm and embracing city almost like something out of Disney World in nearby Orlando, but it does not totally ignore the less welcoming attitudes of the past.
Much of the town, which is about 30 percent black and 20 percent Hispanic, looks like Anywhere, USA, with its shopping mall district, Harley Davison dealership and ubiquitous fast-food chains.
In the downtown area, Victorian-era cottages and old brick office buildings sitting a wide and alligator-infested bulge in the St. Johns River, provide a glimpse of the past - but not all of it. There are no reminders of the lynch mobs and Ku Klux Klan members who once killed blacks with impunity in Sanford and elsewhere across Florida.

Florida was the site of more lynchings per capita than any other southern state, according to Ben Brotemarkle, executive director of the Florida Historical Society. Lynchings were common in the southern U.S. in the second half of 19th century and continued into the 20th century.
Prior to the Second Seminole Indian War of the 1830s runaway slaves from states north of Florida found sanctuary among the American Indian communities in central Florida, Brotemarkle said.
MAYOR URGES PATIENCE
A once booming inland port and transportation hub with riverboat and railroad connections for south Florida, modern day Sanford was named for Henry Shelton Sanford, a Connecticut lawyer and diplomat who became a pioneering citrus grower in the 1870s.
Sanford tried using black laborers to work in his groves. But he wound up contracting immigrants from Sweden and Europe instead, due to what the visitors guide describes as the "violent reaction of some locals," who objected to the very idea of employing black farmhands.
The city's museum has a small display with a newspaper clipping documenting Sanford's shabby treatment of Robinson, But the Swedish immigrants, who founded the community of New Upsala and are credited with becoming some of Sanford's most civic-minded citizens, get more prominent billing.
The sole African American on Sanford's city commission, Velma Williams, 70, sees some positive signs. "Despite this tragedy, some good is going to come out of it," she said. "This subject which no one wants to talk about - race relations - will occur. We're going to have to get together."
The town is a close-knit community where segregation is a thing of the past, said Theo Hollerbach, 54, a German-born chef and owner of the Willow Tree Café in Sanford's historic area.
So far, he has supported the protesters who have marched through Sanford's streets calling for justice, he said, noting how peaceful they have been.
Some community and church leaders from the mayor on down fear that the protests over the Martin killing could turn ugly if Zimmerman does not end up in court.
In an interview with Reuters in his city hall office, Bonaparte said he was urging patience and time for Angela Corey, the special prosecutor appointed by the governor, to reach her decision.
He added: "This touched a nerve in America about black life, particularly young black male youths, not being valued."

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts
#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
02 - 08 April 2012

Solar activity was at very low to low levels. Region 1450 (N16, L=324, class/area Esi/180 on 06 April) produced 4 C-class flares including a C1/Sf at 2110 UTC on 05 April with associated Type II (360 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps along with a partial halo coronal mass ejection (CME) first seen in SOHO/LASCO C2 imagery at 05/2125 UTC. Region 1450 also produced several C-class flares from 04 to 05 April; the largest, a C3/1f at 1624 UTC on 05 April. Region 1452 (N18, L=285, class/area Dsi/040 on 04 April) was also responsible for a C2 flare that occurred at 1708 UTC on 07 April. Two filament eruptions were observed. The first was a filament eruption near N26E14 first observed in SOHO/LASCO C2 imagery beginning at 0224 UTC on 02 April. The CME was partially Earth-directed; however the majority of the ejecta were northerly. The second filament eruption occurred between 1825 - 1900 UTC on 07 April in the northwest quadrant near Region 1451 (N17, L=306, class/area Cro/020 on 30 March). The associated CME had an approximate plane of sky speed of 690 km/s with the majority of the ejecta directed southwest of the Earth.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit ranged between normal and moderate levels.

Geomagnetic field activity was quiet to unsettled during the period, with the sole exception of a single active period between 09-12 UTC on 05 April as the result of sustained southward Bz.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
09 April - 05 May 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels throughout the period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels from 09-13 April. Flux values are forecast to increase to high levels from 14-18 April, due to CH high speed stream effects. Values should decrease to normal/moderate levels again for 19 April through 05 May.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period at quiet to unsettled levels, and remain so from 09 April through 15 April, due to the combination of two anticipated CME arrivals from filament eruptions as well as anticipated CH effects. Conditions are expected to recover to mostly quiet levels from 16-22 April, before increasing to unsettled levels on 23-24 April. This increase is forecast as the result of an expected recurrent negative polarity coronal hole. Mostly quiet levels are anticipated from 25 April through the end of the period on 05 May.

I have a 180 with a AM / CW SSB switch that, courtesy of a mouse, has a resistance of 180 ohms from the B+ contact to the switch frame. The part number is K42037-2. Has anyone an idea for a source.

The most interesting piece of amateur equipment I can remember is an old WW2 vintage linear amplifier using 2 4-400 tubes and what I think were 2- 866 mercury vapor rectifier tubes (the ones with the "purple haze") connected to a bunch of oil filled high voltage capacitors.

I powered that thing up sometime in the mid 1970's. It was located at my college amateur radio club. Unfortunately, there was a lot of dust on top of the capacitors and once they charged up they started arcing. It sounded like someone firing a .357. I yanked the power plug and acted like nothing had happened but I had already got the attention of about half the people in the building.

Next, we tried connectig it to our Drake TX4-C transmitter. That worked but the TV station across the street was hearing us on their headphones during the afternoon news broadcast and so ended the experiment with high power amateur radio.

No pictures available but imagine an open rack with all the tubes and wiring exposed with voltages exceeding 3000 volts.

Fox Orlando Affiliate Calls Neo-Nazis "a Civil Rights Group"
Monday, 09 April 2012 10:53 By Judd Legum, ThinkProgress | Report

A Fox Orlando affiliate decribed Neo-Nazis as “a civil rights group” on a television broadcast and online. The group of Neo-Nazis, known as the National Socialist Movement, has been conducting armed patrols of the streets of Sanford, Florida, the town where Trayvon Marting was shot dead.

The Fox Orlando affiliate, WOFL, aired a shockingly uncritical report of the group’s activities. The Fox reporter introduced the group by saying, “There’s another civil rights group in town.” She also conducts an interview with the group’s leader, Jeff Schoep, without challenging any of his claims about the nature and mission of the group. Watch it (via Little Green Footballs):

An article with a brief summary of the segment first appeared online with the headline: “Civil rights group patrolling Sanford.” (It was subsequently removed without explaination.)

The Southern Poverty Law Center has more details about the group:

[T]he National Socialist Movement (NSM) is one of the largest and most prominent neo-Nazi groups in the United States. The group is notable for its violent anti-Jewish rhetoric, its racist views and its policy allowing members of other racist groups to join NSM while remaining members of other groups. Until 2007, NSM members protested in full Nazi uniforms, now traded in for black “Battle Dress Uniforms.” [...]

The group openly idolizes Adolf Hitler, described in NSM propaganda as, “Our Fuhrer, the beloved Holy Father of our age … a visionary in every respect.” NSM says only heterosexual “pure-blood whites” should be allowed U.S. citizenship and that all nonwhites should be deported, regardless of legal status. As Schoep put it: “The Constitution was written by white men alone. Therefore, it was intended for whites alone.”

The Fox reporter, Jennifer Bisram, includes none of the group’s Nazi ties or incindiary history in her report. She concludes: “They say they are just a civil rights group tyring to protect people in case things get out of hand. They say they intend to follow all the Florida laws while patrolling." Fox Orlando has published a new story under the title "Neo-Nazi group patrolling Sanford." The video remains unchanged.

i am shocked:not only has conservatism been tied to low I.Q./low functioning individuals/but also research shows that low-effort thought promotes political conservatism:political viewpoints of patrons with high blood alcohol levels were more likely to be conservative

Conservative Politics, 'Low-Effort' Thinking Linked In New Study
The Huffington Post | By David Freeman
Posted: 04/ 9/2012 10:44 am Updated: 04/ 9/2012 2:16 pm

Conservatives and liberals don't seem to agree about much, and they might not agree about recent studies linking conservatism to low intelligence and "low-effort" thinking.

As The Huffington Post reported in February, a study published in the journal "Psychological Science" showed that children who score low on intelligence tests gravitate toward socially conservative political views in adulthood--perhaps because conservative ideologies stress "structure and order" that make it easier to understand a complicated world.

Ouch.

And now there's the new study linking conservative ideologies to "low-effort" thinking.

"People endorse conservative ideology more when they have to give a first or fast response," the study's lead author, University of Arkansas psychologist Dr. Scott Eidelman, said in a written statement released by the university.

Does the finding suggest that conservatives are lazy thinkers?

"Not quite," Dr. Eidelman told The Huffington Post in an email. "Our research shows that low-effort thought promotes political conservatism, not that political conservatives use low-effort thinking."

For the study, a team of psychologists led by Dr. Eidelman asked people about their political viewpoints in a bar and in a laboratory setting.

Bar patrons were asked about social issues before blowing into a Breathalyzer. As it turned out, the political viewpoints of patrons with high blood alcohol levels were more likely to be conservative than were those of patrons whose blood alcohol levels were low.

But it wasn't just the alcohol talking, according to the statement. When the researchers conducted similar interviews in the lab, they found that people who were asked to evaluate political ideas quickly or while distracted were more likely to express conservative viewpoints.

"Keeping people from thinking too much...or just asking them to deliberate or consider information in a cursory manner can impact people's political attitudes, and in a way that consistently promotes political conservatism," Dr. Eidelman said in the email.

The study was published online in the journal "Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin."

What do you think? Are conservatives less intelligent than liberals--or more intelligent? And is conservatism a matter of lazy thinking?

There can always be something 'secret' in most any part of the radio spectrum.

One of the things I liked to look for (along with Glenn Hauser) above 30 MHz were harmonics of various SW broadcast stations when the sunspot cycle supported propagation.

I'd just use a scanner capable of receiving AM hooked up to a nice hank of wire.

Cuba - they use it now. Not of the same quality as Sackville of course, but just as close. Besides, here in California, Chinese mainland stations are received just as well as the Cuban or Sackville relay transmissions.

Also, French Guiana has a relay station ready and willing to provide more business. And, if RNW does not tear down Bonaire, that's available too.

I know this isn't a SW question, but I've been searching the internet to no avail for a device that can be plugged into an AC outlet to display, with LED numbers big enough to see across the room, the AC voltage at the outlet. I know there are power strips and PDU's that do this, but I only need a stand-alone device, housed in a cabinet, that can sit on a desk, who's ONLY function is to ACCURATELY display the voltage. A multimeter is not practical due to battery drain from being on constantly.

Anyone know of such a device? Thanks.

Any right to listen is overridden by various national regulators such as the FCC in America.
Consider the following Icom receiver:

http://www.icomamerica.com/en/products/receivers/tabletop/r9500/specifications.aspx

Amazing specs with an amazing price ($13k). Frequency coverage from 0.005 - 3335 MHz.
However; cell bands (822-851 and 867-896) are blocked in the USA, and in France; coverage over 30Mhz is limited to ham bands and FM broadcast.
Unbelieveable.
Incroyable.

Looks like this rocket launch was about as successful as AM IBOC.

Their first long range missile test is still transmitting patriotic music back weather data from the bottom of the Yellow Sea.

The magic incantation is "digital line voltage monitor", I get lots of hits

MFJ has one for $25 that is analog.

The Plot To Seize The White House

By Jules Archer

FORWARD

This is the true story of a remarkable American who, during the early New Deal years, was sought by wealthy plotters in the United States to lead a putsch to overthrow the government and establish an American Fascist dictatorship.

According to retired Representative John W. McCormack, former Speaker of the House, if the late Major General Smedley Butler of the U.S. Marine Corps had not been a stubborn devotee of democracy, Americans today could conceivably be living under an American Mussolini, Hitler, or Franco.

An ironic aspect of the conspiracy General Butler unmasked is that few Americans have ever heard about it, or even know anything about the general. As children all of us were taught about the treason of Aaron Burr and Benedict Arnold, whose betrayals were safely cobwebbed by the distant past. But school texts that deal with the New Deal are uniquely silent about the powerful Americans who plotted to seize the White House with a private army, hold President Franklin D. Roosevelt prisoner, and get rid of him if he refused to serve as their puppet in a dictatorship they planned to impose and control.

There is strong evidence to suggest that the conspirators may have been too important politically, socially, and economically to be brought to justice after their scheme had been exposed before the McCormack-Dickstein Committee of the House of Representatives. The largely anti-Roosevelt press of the New Deal era scotched the story as expeditiously as possible by outright suppression, distortion, and attempts to ridicule General Butler's testimony as capricious fantasy.

Smedley Butler's whole life, however, was proof that he was a man of incorruptible character, integrity, and patriotism, with a deserved reputation for bluntly speaking the whole truth at all times, regardless of the consequences. He was named by Theodore Roosevelt "the outstanding American soldier." The official Marine Corps record calls him "one of the most colorful officers in the Marine Corps' long history" and "one of the two Marines who received two Medals of Honor for separate acts of outstanding heroism." He was decorated no fewer than twenty times.

I like Butler for his honest book about the utter phoniness of all modern wars. But this article is written from a pro-regime point of view. As Butler would probably have admitted after the second great slaughter got underway, the Roosevelt regime itself _was_ a tyranny, and an almost totally illegal tyranny at that.

With all good wishes,

On the web, go to radioreference.com. It covers all aspects of radio communication, but is primarily oriented to public safety communications.

Just below the top banner, click on 'live audio'. You may or may not have to download a program, but it should work. There is a forum devoted to 'live feeds'. Have fun.

'Uncle Obama' wins a driver's license

An April 3 story in the Boston Herald, "Uncle Obama on the roads again," reported that Onyango Obama, the president's uncle and a Kenyan national who has been living and working illegally in the U.S. since 1963 - even after he was ordered deported in 1992 - "scored his limited driver's license yesterday from the Registrys Wilmington branch, after convincing a hearing officer that life without wheels would have posed an undue hardship on his livelihood as a liquor-store manager. Obama bolstered his case with a letter from his employer."

i am shocked:not only has conservatism been tied to low I.Q./low
functioning individuals/but also research shows that low-effort thought promotes political conservatism:political viewpoints of patrons with high blood alcohol levels were more likely to be conservative

Conservative Politics, 'Low-Effort' Thinking Linked In New Study
The Huffington Post | By David Freeman
Posted: 04/ 9/2012 10:44 am Updated: 04/ 9/2012 2:16 pm

Conservatives and liberals don't seem to agree about much, and they might not agree about recent studies linking conservatism to low intelligence and "low-effort" thinking.
As The Huffington Post reported in February, a study published in the journal "Psychological Science" showed that children who score low on intelligence tests gravitate toward socially conservative political views in adulthood--perhaps because conservative ideologies stress "structure and order" that make it easier to understand a complicated world.
Ouch.
And now there's the new study linking conservative ideologies to "low-effort" thinking.

"People endorse conservative ideology more when they have to give a first or fast response," the study's lead author, University of Arkansas psychologist Dr. Scott Eidelman, said in a written statement released by the university.
Does the finding suggest that conservatives are lazy thinkers?
"Not quite," Dr. Eidelman told The Huffington Post in an email. "Our research shows that low-effort thought promotes political conservatism, not that political conservatives use low-effort thinking."

For the study, a team of psychologists led by Dr. Eidelman asked people about their political viewpoints in a bar and in a laboratory setting.
Bar patrons were asked about social issues before blowing into a Breathalyzer. As it turned out, the political viewpoints of patrons with high blood alcohol levels were more likely to be conservative than were those of patrons whose blood alcohol levels were low.
But it wasn't just the alcohol talking, according to the statement. When the researchers conducted similar interviews in the lab, they found that people who were asked to evaluate political ideas quickly or while distracted were more likely to express conservative viewpoints.
"Keeping people from thinking too much...or just asking them to deliberate or consider information in a cursory manner can impact people's political attitudes, and in a way that consistently promotes political conservatism," Dr. Eidelman said in the email.
The study was published online in the journal "Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin."
What do you think? Are conservatives less intelligent than liberals--or more intelligent? And is conservatism a matter of lazy thinking?

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals
employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians,
Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Bobby Jindal Recall: Teachers Seek To Oust Louisiana Governor
Posted: 04/13/2012 4:07 pm Updated: 04/13/2012 5:11 pm

Two teachers have launched a recall drive to oust Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal (R) and state House Speaker Chuck Kleckley (R-Lake Charles) from office.
Angie Bonvillain and Brenda Romero, teachers in Calcasieu Parish, have launched recalls for both over the education reform policies recently passed by the legislature. The policies include relaxing teacher tenure rules, increased power for school administrators to fire teachers, tying test scores to teacher performance and the promotion of school vouchers, along with the creation of new charter schools.
"This is not education reform," Bonvillain said. "It will gut public schools in a lot of ways. We do not feel like this will help education."
Bonvillain and Romero said that Jindal's policies, which were enacted in recent weeks by legislators, convinced them there is a need to change the state's leadership. The move comes less than a year after Jindal was reelected to a second term by 49 points over a little known Democratic opponent, teacher Tara Hollis.
The two said the policies pushed by Jindal will be destructive to public schools, moving money toward private schools and relying on test scores to gauge teacher performance. Romero noted that the group also is looking at Jindal's plans for the state's retirement system and his efforts to privatize state prisons to galvanize support.
"He waited until he was elected for a second term and then unleashed this entire change of the education system. Now he is going after the retirement system," Romero told HuffPost. "This is all very fascist to me."
Romero suggested that Jindal is not working alone, saying that she believes the American Legislative Exchange Council is behind Jindal's efforts.

"The governor is doing the job of ALEC," she said. "They are doing an overhaul of the entire state. It is a scripted ALEC overhaul."
Romero and Bonvillain face an uphill battle. Under Louisiana law, they must gather signatures from a third of all registered voters in the state to force a Jindal recall and a third of all registered voters in Kleckley's House district to recall him. The signature counts are roughly 10,000 for Kleckley and 900,000 for Jindal within 180 days of the start of the petitions. The requirements have been called some of the toughest in the nation.
Bonvillain declined to say how many signatures have been collected since the petitions went out three weeks ago, but said there has been an enthusiastic response.
Romero said she is meeting with statewide organizers this weekend to discuss the signature drive and also will meet those behind the effort to recall Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker (R). The teacher's union and Democratic Party are not behind the effort, said Romero, but it has been bipartisan in terms of who has signed.
"Bobby Jindal has accomplished something I have not seen anyone else do: He has blurred the lines between parties," Romero said. "Republicans are signing just as quickly. They feel betrayed."
In addition to the June recall pending against Walker, two other governors in American history -- North Dakota's Lynn Frazier (R) in 1921 and California's Gray Davis (D) in 2003 -- have faced recalls; both were removed from office. Former Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham (R) had a recall qualify against him in 1988 but was impeached prior to the election. Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer (R) and Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder (R) are also facing recall drives against them this year.
Jindal's spokesman said the governor is not worried about the effort. "No. We're not concerned and not surprised that the coalition of the status quo is trying to intimidate folks who want to reform our schools and make them better for our children," Jindal spokesman Frank Collins said.
Kleckley told HuffPost Friday afternoon that he believes he is being targeted by Bonvillain and Romero because of his work on education reform, but noted that he has done the right thing for the state. He is not concerned about the recall attempt, he said.
"If education reform was easy, it would have been done years ago," Kleckley said. "When you've got a state that is 47th in the nation in the area of K through 12, and 44-percent of our schools are graded D or F, I think that there is a good case for education reform in Louisiana."
Kleckley stressed that he is a product of public schools, that his two daughters are public school teachers and that his wife volunteers in public schools. "I think the people will measure me on the success of 12 years of public service and not one bill," he said.
He and other legislators have turned their attention to the state's retirement system, said Kleckley, who added he is also working with Jindal to develop a balanced budget for the state with no tax hikes. Only one state legislative leader -- Arizona Senate President Russell Pearce (R) in 2011 -- has been recalled in American history.

Bonvillain said that she and Romero are not deterred by the odds. "Do I think it is going to be easy, no. Do I think it's right, yes," she said. "I always tell my children to stand up for what's right. It doesn't matter how popular you are."
UPDATE: 4:50 p.m. -- This story was updated to include the comments of state House Speaker Chuck Kleckley (R-Lake Charles). The speaker responded to the reporter's request for comment after the story was originally published.

Liberty Net: April 7, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

DO YOU HAVE an idea that youï¿½d like to share with other intelligent, thoughtful radio amateurs in a free, uncensored setting? Why not check in to the Liberty Net? If you canï¿½t check in because youï¿½re temporarily off the air, send a message to us via the contact form at http://3950.net and weï¿½ll pass it along to Marty, N2IRJ, who runs a lively phone patch during the net each week.

Here are some of the interesting ideas brought up during this weekï¿½s session of the net:

ï¿½ Obamaï¿½s press secretary Jay Carney recently explained that what many people see as lies, evasions, and perjury by the regimeï¿½s figurehead are simply his ï¿½speaking in shorthand,ï¿½ adding that, after all, ï¿½he is a law professor.ï¿½ (24 minutes)

ï¿½ Sanford, Florida, where the George Zimmerman ï¿½ Trayvon Martin altercation occurred, is a very ï¿½diverseï¿½ place which is listed in the bottom three per cent. of places to live based on safety. (27 minutes)

ï¿½ There is a deliberate plan by the Washington regime to settle large numbers of Third World immigrants in Americaï¿½s few remaining nearly all-White communities. If the same thing was being done to Middle Easterners or Tibetans or Amazonians, it would quite rightly be called genocide. (34 minutes)

ï¿½ When a major lottery jackpot hit $656 million recently, the entire amount was just barely enough to run the Washington regime for 95 minutes. (42 minutes)

ï¿½ One of the main reasons that health care costs are spiraling out of control is the stranglehold that the pharmaceutical companies have on the entire field. If inexpensive, natural alternative medicines and supplements were allowed into the market fairly, costs would drop dramatically. (50 minutes)

ï¿½ Why do the Washington regime and the billionairesï¿½ media almost totally ignore the tsunami of Black-on-Black crime and Black-on-White crime, but they make a single perceived case of White-on-Black crime into a national cause cï¿½liï¿½bre? (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ At the rate illegal Mestizos are entering this country, will there come a time when Mexico will be nearly empty of them? Will it be permitted, then, for us to move there? (1 hour 44 minutes)

ï¿½ When Obama and Holder purposely and melodramatically fan the racial flames of the Tulsa and Sanford killings, is their main motive to consolidate non-White support behind the administration? ï¿½ or to distract us from something far more sinister? (1 hour 47 minutes)

ï¿½ Remember the failed privacy- and free-speech-destroying SOPA legislation? The regimeï¿½s Congress is now trying to pass the same provisions piecemeal, without attracting too much attention, with their CISPA bill. Repeatedly attempting to circumvent the Constitution ï¿½ and the wishes of almost all Internet users ï¿½ should be a punishable crime in itself. (1 hour 53 minutes)

ï¿½ Lee Whitnum, an up-and-coming activist who is vying to replace U.S. Rep. Chris Murphy in the Democratic primary, showed unusual courage when she called Murphy a ï¿½whoreï¿½ who had ï¿½sold his soul to AIPACï¿½ ï¿½ the virtually untouchable and unbelievably powerful Israeli lobby group, to which most members of Congress willingly sell themselves. (1 hour 56 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And he and Al, N2SAG operate live feeds and chats during Net times (see the links in the left column of this page) that let you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Please check in with your call sign, and add your voice to the most exciting net on the amateur bands ï¿½ every Saturday night, starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The frequency varies to avoid causing interference, but is almost always somewhere above 3950 kHz LSB.

Our deepest thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in running the Liberty Net, which is now in its 38th year.

Well, OK, not from THE Titanic, but there are several amateur radio Titanic "special event" stations on the air. Typically, their QSL cards have an interesting picture of the Titanic, a nice addition to your QSL collection.

1) Go to www.dxsummit.fi

2) At the home page, choose "Search"

3) At the Search page, in the "search string" column, put in "mgy". This is the radio call of the Titanic and is incorporated in most of the special event station's ham calls. Exception: KM1CC, the Marconi station in Wellfleet, MA that copied the Titanic's distress call. Do a separate search for that station.

4) Choose "search any column"

5) For "mode", choose SSB, CW or ALL. Your choice.

6) Press the "search" button. This will show you what stations are on and their latest frequency.

7) When you copy the station, look up their QSL address on the web. Report the time, frequency and the station they were working.

That's all there is to it; your chance to participate in the Titanic's 100th anniversary. (and don't forget a little prayer or moment of silence for the lost souls)

It's a 13 minute long talking blues from 1968. And a few funny visual puns. Not historically accurate.

Brookings, South Dakota. Dude doesn't know a Buffalo from a Bison, he used to argue with me all the time about that, about ten something years ago on WebTV.There are Asian Buffalo and there are African Buffalo, bit Bison are not Buffalo and Buffalo are not Bison. A woman in New Mexico (she is origionally from South Dakota) agreed with me, she put up a website that proves it, in the WebTV South Dakota newsgroup. I don't think that WebTV South Dakota newsgroup exist online anymore.I saw some Buffalo when I was in Vietnam. I have always known the difference between Bison and Buffalo.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts

09 - 15 April 2012

Solar activity was at very low to low levels. Low levels were observed on 09 April and 15 April. Region 1450 (N16, L=324, class/area Esi/180 on 06 April) produced a C2 flare at 09/0122 UTC while Region 1451 (N17, L=306, class/area Cro/020 on 30 March) produced a C3 flare at 09/1244 UTC. Associated with the C3 flare was a Type II Radio Sweep (478 km/s) and a CME first observed in SOHO/LASCO C2 imagery at 09/1325 UTC off the west limb with an estimated plane of sky speed of 767 km/s. Solar activity was at very low levels until 15 April when two low level C-class flares were observed just around the north east limb at 15/0140 UTC and 15/0234 UTC respectively. A faint partial halo CME was also observed beginning at 15/1000 UTC in SOHO/LASCO C2 imagery with the majority of the ejecta directed off the northeast limb. The CME was associated with a B9/Sf flare that occurred at 15/0908 UTC from Region 1459 (S16, L=96, class/area Dai/80 on 15 April). None of the CMEs are expected to be geoeffective.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal levels on 12 April. Moderate levels were reached on 09, 10 & 11 April and again on 13 April. High levels were reached on 14 & 15 April.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet to minor storm conditions with a period of major storming observed at high latitudes. The summary period started with mostly quiet conditions until 12 April. At approximately 12/0300 UTC, solar wind speed began to show a slow rise while the total field (Bt) component of the interplanetary magnetic field (IMF) increased to around 10 nT as a coronal hole high speed stream was moving into a geoeffective position. Solar wind speeds gradually increased to approximately 655 km/s by 13/0848 UTC. The geomagnetic field responded with quiet to active periods on 12 April and active to minor storm periods with an isolated major storm period through mid-day 13 April. By noon on 13 April, solar wind speeds were elevated still around 616 km/s, however the total field had decreased to around 3 nT. Solar wind speed slowly decreased to around 430 km/s by the end of the period. The geomagnetic field was at mostly quiet levels with isolated unsettled to active periods from late on 13 April through the end of the summary period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
16 April - 12 May 2012

Solar activity is expected to be very low to low levels with the slight chance for M-class flares during the period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to begin the period at high levels, and remain so through 18 April. Conditions are forecast to decrease to normal to moderate levels through 10 May, before increasing to high levels again on 11 and 12 May.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period at mostly quiet levels and remain so through 19 April. Quiet to unsettled conditions are forecast due to a solar sector boundary crossing (SSBC) anticipated on 20 April, before returning to mostly quiet conditions on 21 and 22 April. Unsettled to active levels are forecast on 23 and 24 April from an expected recurrent coronal hole (CH). Mostly quiet levels are expected to return 25 April through 01 May. Should see unsettled to active conditions on 02, 03, & 04 May as the ambient background solar winds speeds should increase along with more possible southward Bz. Quiet conditions should return 5-8 May, before the return of high speed solar wind from a large negative polarity CH on 9, 10, 11 May, which is forecast to produce unsettled to active conditions and a possible isolated minor storm in the night sector. 12 May should see a return to mostly quiet levels to round out the period.

How did you set up a service call without rebooting? Time-Warner tells you to reboot before they even pick up the phone.

Larry; take some sage advice. Once upon a time everything but the phone had tubes. If something quit working, there was a 95% chance a fresh tube would cure it. Since about 1985, when microprocessors started getting a foothold, the COLD BOOT (or even a recessed RESET button) will fix about 95% of the trouble.

I don't know about Commiecast, but we have a local Time-Warner office. If I suspect my cable modem is bad (I don't have a cable box) I can just take it to the office and they'll swap it out, with smile. Much faster than waiting for the truck.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

IS THERE ANY amateur radio net that is even remotely comparable to the Liberty Net? If so, Iï¿½d like to hear about it! Every week ï¿½ 1,976 weeks and counting ï¿½ the net offers an uncensored forum for thinking amateurs to discuss and debate the issues of the day, without any interference from the ï¿½gatekeepersï¿½ of the controlled media.

Here are some of the thoughts expressed during this weekï¿½s session of the net:

ï¿½ Why do so many controlled media outlets consistently refer to George Zimmerman as White, when he clearly is not? Are they consciously trying to stir up Black-on-White conflict? In the recent Tulsa shootings, theyï¿½re doing the same thing: One of the alleged shooters is constantly referred to as White, but is definitely an Amerindian. (10 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is it that, at the very moment when newly-impoverished Americans are finding it hard to maintain their home ownership, the elites are now talking about the purposeful depopulation and ï¿½re-wildingï¿½ of the Midwest? (30 minutes)

ï¿½ The controlled media have gone into ï¿½total ignoreï¿½ mode when it comes to the Ron Paul campaign, despite the fact his popularity is skyrocketing, especially among young people. (33 minutes)

ï¿½ Speaking of the Pauls, Rand Paul recently successfully blocked a move by the IRS that would have imposed double taxation and forced Switzerland to violate the financial privacy of depositors in Swiss banks. (35 minutes)

ï¿½ If George Zimmerman is a ï¿½White shooter,ï¿½ then Barack Obama is a ï¿½White president.ï¿½ (39 minutes)

ï¿½ One of the many unheralded costs of living under the fractional reserve banking system: over 1,900 economic-crash-related suicides in Greece alone. (44 minutes)

ï¿½ In one Greek city, a creative computer programmer has invented a thriving alternative currency called the TEM, giving the people ï¿½ not the bankers ï¿½ the benefit of their own credit. In America, doing the same good deed would give the Washington regime an excuse to imprison you. (47 minutes)

ï¿½ One positive result of the economic crisis is the proliferation of ï¿½guerrilla gardensï¿½ where the hungry ï¿½ and not just the people who did the planting ï¿½ can get food whenever they need it. As you might have guessed, the regime in Washington wants to suppress them and criminalize their users and growers. (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ Since the end of the Second World War, the United States has killed far more people than all of the infamous dictators of history put together. There will be blow-back for these aggressive, inexcusable acts. Time to stop the murderous regime in Washington and its endless wars. (1 hour 13 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And check out our live feeds and chats during Net times too ï¿½ see the N2SAG and N2IRJ feeds in the left column of this page.

Please check in with your call sign, and add your voice to the most exciting net on the amateur bands ï¿½ every Saturday night, starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our deepest thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in running the Liberty Net, which is now in its 38th year.

Just wondering a bit about how this is accomplished:

Those iPad APPs that have scanner feeds from literally all over, as well as the feeds available thru RReference:

How do they latch on to all of them ?

Is it volunteers picking them up, and then allowing connections to their receiver, or...?

radioreference.com is the source for most scanner feeds. They offer free membership for anyone that provides a feed and a bonus if your feed goes to the top.

Try this. Unplug your router and leave it unplugged for a minute.
Then, plug it back in and let it start back up. After a couple of Thanks. Still a tad pricey. I'm glad I hung onto my Lowe HF-150.

Speaking of the History Channel, ever see that Ancient Aliens show on History 2 (H2)? What a load of crap. I actually do think UFO's exist, but most of those ancient alien theories are baloney based on wishful thinking.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
16 - 22 April 2012

Solar activity was at low to moderate levels. Moderate levels were reached on 16 April with an M1.7 flare from Region 1461 (N13, L=070, class/area Hsx/090 on 18 April) that occurred at 1745 UTC. Low levels were observed from 17-22 April. On 18 April, Region 1463 (S26, L=160, class/area Cso/100 on 20 April) produced a C8.9/Sf flare at 1239 UTC with an associated coronal mass ejection (CME) and a C5.3 flare with an associated Type II (est. 621 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps. On 19 April, a C7.0 flare occurred at 1126 UTC with an associated Type II and Type IV radio sweeps and a non-geoeffective CME off the west limb. This event was likely from old Region 1455 (N06, L=206, class/area Fsi/200 on 16 April). Region 1462 (S25, L=141, class/area Dho/410 on 20 April) produced a C1.8 flare at 1515
UTC with an associated CME on 19 April as well. Only low level
C-class flares were observed for the rest of the summary period.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels on 16 and 17 April. Moderate levels were observed on 18,19, and 21 April while normal levels were observed on 20 and 22
April.

Geomagnetic field activity was mostly quiet, with brief intermittent periods of unsettled and active levels on several days due to nighttime effects and southward Bz. A solar sector boundary crossing was observed on 20 April, and a weak glancing blow CME occurred on 21 April, again producing unsettled to active periods briefly.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
23 April - 19 May 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels with the slight chance for M-class flares during the period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels from the beginning of the period on 23 April, and persist through 10 May. Flux values are forecast to increase to high levels from 11-14 May due to a coronal hole (CH) high speed stream. From 15 May through the end of the period on the 19th, values are expected to return to moderate or lower levels.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period at unsettled and active levels, as the result of a few weak CMEs along with effects from a negative polarity CH. Conditions should settle to mostly quiet levels from 26 April through 08 May, before increasing to active levels with the chance for a minor storm on 09-11 May. Mostly active conditions are expected 14-15 May. The increases in activity are expected from a pair of negative polarity coronal holes. Mostly quiet levels are expected in between the two features on 12 and 13 May, and again from 16-19 May to close out the period.

Long before cell phones, I saw people driving while reading pocket books, which they held against the top of their steering wheels while driving. When their cars drifted off the road, they would correct to bring themselves back into the center of their lanes. But how could the police know after a crash whether it was caused by the guy reading a book or not? Probably they couldn't. So the statistics on such a thing are highly suspect. Whenever I see statistics, I always ask myself, "How would I determine such a thing?" And, If I couldn't figure out the answer to that. I reason that there probably isn't any answer, and they are just blowing smoke......

With cell phones, it's pretty easy to determine if they were in use when the accident happened, since there are records of time/location (cell)/duration/etc. that the police can access within minutes.

That being said, it would still be conjecture as to whether the person being on the phone was directly involved in the accident (barring eyewitnesses seeing the driver texting, etc.)

Yes. I don't text. I don't even know how to text. When my cell phone rings while I am driving, I pick it up and say, "Hang on a minute". then I pull over to the side of the road and continue the conversation after I am stopped. I can't see how this could result in an accident, unless it is impossible for me to pull over, in which case the person calling me would just have to wait. I see no purpose in texting anyone at any time. Speaking is faster and doesn't require the use of your eyes. There is no way to insure that other people on the road with you are driving safely. There aren't enough policemen to have one in every car. So, it is just one of those million hazards that you have to put up with in life that may kill you. If you can't handle it, then you should move into a padded cell somewhere and give up living altogether.

It's all part of the nanny state. And you can't blame liberals for all of it, conservatives have come up with more than enough of this silly crap as well.

The way I see it, if talking on a hands-free phone or a CB, ham radio, etc., is a hazardous distraction, then would not talking to a passenger, listening to the radio, or humming your favorite tune also be JUST as dangerous? Are we ready to have a one-person-per-car rule, with no radios/tape players/CD players/mp3 players, ad inf.?

I remember when I was a kid, we were FREE to ride our bicycles/scooters/skates/skateboards without some government entity telling us we had to wear a helmet, knee pads, elbow pads and a sweaty vinyl reflective vest (even in the bright summer sunlight!).

And some are making a big deal of Romney carrying Seamus in a cartop carrier.. I seem to remember that there have been, for some time (not sure about NOW), cartop carriers specifically made for pets, complete with food and water dispensers. And damn... is that any more dangerous for your pet than (or even AS dangerous), say, letting them ride in the back of your pickup (still done in rural areas all the time)? Or, for that matter, letting them ride in your car with a window open?

Point being, I'm so tired of having our "servants" tell us how we must live. Allow people the freedom to make their own choices and their own mistakes. Yeah, WARN them of the possible consequences of a given action, but don't force them to go to ludicrous extremes just to be able to do anything.

Many thanks. Unfortunately, their entire BC sked right now on 11735 is during high daylight hours here on the West Coast (for you too I think) - there is a slight chance we could hear them around 1600 - 1800 if the freq is clear by that time, but it would work much better overall in winter.

Well, I mostly agree. I blame it on the liberals, whether they are Republicans or Democrats. I agree that it isn't the governments business how I go about protecting/not protecting myself. Its my head, and using our socialized medical system as an excuse to force me to protect it is wrong. However, when it comes to forcing me to protect my dogs and children, that's a different matter. Until they are 18, I think its OK for the government to make laws that protect them from harm. After all, both you and I know that there are some people who should never have children....Or pets, for that matter.

THAT argument is the one that cuts to the core of this idiocy.

Don't forget how much Police, Fire, Ambulance, Taxi, City Bus and package delivery services depend on being able to talk while driving!

It's incredible to me that we were warned long ago that for a government to try to be all things to all people, to try to be a PARENT over all citizens and to try to eliminate all hazards quickly becomes a nightmare.

Franz Kafka and George Orwell's warnings have not been heeded and the horrors they depicted seem OPTIMISTIC as things progress to levels even worse than what they warned about.

The USA used to berate the USSR for the abuses that STATEISM represent, but our government has become even worse than what we once berated.

Uneducated boobs posing as "social workers" are attempting "social engineering" in various ways.

They won't be happy until we live in a world of nerf foam.

Already, more kids have allergies not because they are exposed to pollen, cat hair, dog fur, etc.
but because they were NOT exposed to many of those things as kids when they would have developed an ability to cope.

Immunizations are a double edge sword like that as well.

If you are immunized against whatever disease, you are not protected against as many variants as you would be if you actually got the disease.

Kids were vaccinated against Polio long after Polio was gone and vaccination deaths outweighed

the risk of the disease. NOW Polio is a threat again because of heavier international travel.

I'm not against vaccinations but the "back end" problems need to be considered more carefully and contamination hazards need to be addressed more seriously, and without legal immunity or actuarial tables car companies made so famous when Pintos were killing people.

(Ford decided the insurance risk and death payouts were smarter than recalling the fire trap car.)

I'm not arguing against seat belts, but lots of people overlook that seat belts actually do kill people too. It's a matter of actuarial tables.
Statistically you are better off to use them than not, but writing off the down side is a lie.

If you found out that your Mom died because the seat belt killed her, you won't like being told that it's an anomoly or having the risk/benefit ratios explained to you.

As a kid I wore helmets for snowmobiling and mini bike riding. I've often wondered if the WEIGHT of these helmets don't actually cause some extra problems.

Then again, when I was a teen I actually brought a shotgun into the local high school.
(Firearms safety classes)

And trap shooting (clay pidgeons at a gun range) was a unit in school psysical education classes.

I think we are being regulated to death by STATEISM guided by fake "social workers" with a "Chicken Little" mindset.
Government as PARENT over all of us.

I thought that making cell phones and ham radios "hands free" was good enough.

Video and cameras catching people reading or texting while driving (like the bus driver a few months ago) seemed like a good solution.

Going after hands free really does compare to having a converstion with passengers.

Some people just can't walk and chew gum at the same time.

We must all be dumbed down to the most incapable common denominator.
That is the government way.

Below is a proposed cell phone law for the city of Evanston. NOTE that there are NO provisions for or CB or Amateur radios mentioned.
And yet another web site mentioned that this politician wants to also ban the use of "other, portable electricic devices" while driving. Nowhere is ANY mention made of Amateur or CB (hard to tell the difference these days) radio.

"Nearly two years after an alderman successfully pushed for an ordinance making it illegal to use a hand-held cell phone while driving, she is now seeking a total ban.

Speaking during the aldermanic comment portion of the Evanston City Council meeting, Alderman Jane Grover, 7th Ward, said Monday she plans to press for a total ban on cell phone use while driving in Evanston, going beyond last year's move which allowed hands-free use of a phone while driving.

Grover said she plans to present the issue for discussion at the Feb. 6 City Council Human Services meeting.

She said her ordinance would ban any use of the cell phone while driving within city limits.

"In a city where we have four or five miles anywhere you want to go, it doesn't make sense your business is so urgent on the phone it can't wait until you get to that destination," she said.

Evanston City Council members approved an ordinance, effective March 15, 2010, that requires hands-free device use in an effort to curtail distracted driving.

Under the city ordinance, violators face a $50 fine, with an added $200 penalty if the violation occurs at the time of a traffic accident."

Non Libertarians never think of things like that when they make laws. They think that they are the only ones who exist, and if a law doesn't bother them, then it shouldn't bother anybody, and therefore, it must be a good thing. So new laws will continue to be put on the books, as long as each one only interferes with the lives of a minority of the people, until we are all cowering in a padded cell somewhere, unable to move without breaking some law or other...

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE MAGIC OF HF radio is much in evidence during every session of the venerable Liberty Net ï¿½ on the air since 1974. Friendships that last decades are made here. Personal lives are made better by the caring and the knowledge shared. And wit and humor, as well as real education you canï¿½t get anywhere else, are much in evidence. No wonder hundreds of people download and listen to the net recordings every week.

Here are some of the topics talked about and debated on this weekï¿½s Liberty Net:

ï¿½ A bill which would establish concentration-style FEMA camps on US military bases ï¿½ with a massive potential population ï¿½ is being justified by reference to the ï¿½unrestï¿½ in Greece, where the people are in open revolt against the bankers. (22 minutes)

ï¿½ If America is basically broke, and if weapons of mass destruction in the Mideast are a bad thing, why are American taxpayers providing and massively funding Israelï¿½s WMDs? (26 minutes)

ï¿½ While Americans lose their homes and scrape for food, the regime in Washington seems to have enough money to develop a new hypersonic aircraft which, it is claimed, will be able to deliver a nuclear weapon anywhere in the world in less than an hour to enforce the will of the oligarchs. (29 minutes)

ï¿½ Here in America we have now achieved the dubious honor of having the very worst characteristics of both a politically correct Marxist state (with its thought police, lack of financial privacy, bleeding of the best to feed the worst, and lack of freedom of association), and a warmongering police state (with its endless aggressive wars and domestic spying and oppression). Add to that the ruthless, heartless finance-capitalism of the bankers ï¿½ and you have oligarch-ruled America 2012. (34 minutes)

ï¿½ Obamaï¿½s own lawyers have attempted to bar the introduction of his alleged birth certificate ï¿½ the one posted on the White House Web site itself ï¿½ as evidence, on the grounds that it is not a valid document. (42 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is uber-oligarch George Soros ï¿½ well-known as an economic terrorist who wrecks a countryï¿½s economy to make a killing on its currency ï¿½ promoted by the controlled media as an ï¿½humanitarianï¿½ and ï¿½philosopherï¿½? (46 minutes)

ï¿½ Canadaï¿½s illegitimate rulers are seriously considering the abolition of cash, because they absolutely hate the fact that the people can use it without being tracked, controlled, and taxed in everything they do. (54 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are the government and the banks allowed to use special and unusually draconian measures to ï¿½collectï¿½ on student loans, when the simple fact is that these loans are totally fictitious and the ï¿½money loanedï¿½ was simply created out of thin air? (57 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net in the area of 3950 kHz and above every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ or listen live on the Internet. And you can listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Each Saturday nightï¿½s mp3 file is usually posted on the next morning ï¿½ Sunday ï¿½ and will be visible that day in the upper right column of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net ï¿½ now in its 38th anniversary year ï¿½ and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

Yeah, but...

No fair just quoting the "laboratory" results. In the real world, the DELIVERY system is everything.

The human lung is made to process AIR, not smoke...and it has been proven conclusively time and again that smoking (of any substance) CAUSES cancer...and emphysema...and cardiovascular problems...and a host of other ills.

So, nice self-serving rationalization, but no cigar.

Then why is there no elevated cancer rate among chronic pot smokers? No cigar but perhaps a blunt?

"People who smoke marijuana do not appear to be at increased risk for developing lung cancer, new research suggests.

While a clear increase in cancer risk was seen among cigarette smokers in the study, no such association was seen for regular cannabis users.

Even very heavy, long-term marijuana users who had smoked more than 22,000 joints over a lifetime seemed to have no greater risk than infrequent marijuana users or nonusers.

The findings surprised the studyï¿½s researchers, who expected to see an increase in cancer among people who smoked marijuana regularly in their youth.

ï¿½We know that there are as many or more carcinogens and co-carcinogens in marijuana smoke as in cigarettes,ï¿½ researcher Donald Tashkin, MD, of UCLAï¿½s David Geffen School of Medicine tells WebMD. ï¿½But we did not find any evidence for an increase in cancer risk for even heavy marijuana smoking.ï¿½ Carcinogens are substances that cause cancer.

Tashkin presented the findings today at The American Thoracic Societyï¿½s 102nd International Conference, held in San Diego.Boomers Reaching Cancer Age"

1587. How Can we Prove There is a God?

How Can we Prove There is a God?

We just begin with simple logic. When something is right in front of our eyes it is difficult to deny it, right? Asking rhetorical questions can be very helpful in presenting our case. Begin by asking the question; "Can you prove you exist?" Yes, of course you can. You merely use your senses to determine what you can see, hear, feel, smell, taste and you have emotions as well. All of this is a part of your existence. But this is not how we perceive God in Islam. We can look to the things He has created and the way He cares for things and sustains us, to know there is no doubt of His existence.

One approach is to suggest simple yet convincing experiments anyone could comprehend. For instance, say to someone, "Consider this the next time you are looking up at the moon or the stars on a clear night; could you drop a drinking glass on the sidewalk and expect it would hit the ground and on impact it would not shatter, but it would divide up into little small drinking glasses, with iced tea in them? Of course not."

Another example is have them consider what might happen if a tornado came through a junkyard and tore through the old cars; would it leave behind a nice new Mercedes with the engine running and no parts left around? Naturally not.

Or ask someone to consider what it would be like if someone told us about a fast food restaurant operating itself without any people there? The food just cooks itself, files from the kitchen to the table and then when we are done, the dishes jump back the kitchen to wash themselves. This is too crazy for anyone to even think about.

After reflecting on all of the above, how could we look to the universe above us through a telescope or observe the cells in a microscope and then think all of this came about as a result of a "big bang" or some "accident"?

Then why is there no elevated cancer rate among chronic pot smokers? No cigar but perhaps a blunt?

"People who smoke marijuana do not appear to be at increased risk for developing lung cancer, new research suggests.

While a clear increase in cancer risk was seen among cigarette smokers
in the study, no such association was seen for regular cannabis users.

Even very heavy, long-term marijuana users who had smoked more than 22,000 joints over a lifetime seemed to have no greater risk than infrequent marijuana users or nonusers.

The findings surprised the studyï¿½s researchers, who expected to see an increase in cancer among people who smoked marijuana regularly in their youth.

in marijuana smoke as in cigarettes,ï¿½ researcher Donald Tashkin, MD, of UCLAï¿½s David Geffen School of Medicine tells WebMD. ï¿½But we did not find any evidence for an increase in cancer risk for even heavy marijuana smoking.ï¿½ Carcinogens are substances that cause cancer.

Tashkin presented the findings today at The American Thoracic Societyï¿½s 102nd International Conference, held in San Diego.Boomers Reaching

Cancer Age"

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
23 - 29 April 2012

Solar activity was moderate because one M1/1N flare occurred on 27 April at 0821Z. Region 1466 (N12, L=40, class/area=Dso/190) produced this, six C-class x-ray flares, and 13 optical flares throughout the week. The remainder of the flare activity was confined to C-class events. Region 1465 (S18, L=55, class/area=Dki/400) the most prolific and the most magnetically complex of the 14 regions on the disk, exhibiting beta-gamma-delta characteristics on 24 and 27 April. The largest region was Region 1460 (N16, L=109, class/area=Dkc/490) which reached its maximum coverage on 21 April.
Solar activity was not confined to flares, several CMEs were observed during the period.

On 23 April, A C2/Sf flare was observed from Region 1461 (N10, L=75, plage) at 1747Z, accompanied by a Type II radio burst (1605 km/s). A Halo-CME was subsequently observed in SOHO/LASCO coronagraph imagery at 1848Z (C2) and 1906Z (C3). Plane of sky measurements suggested a speed in the 400 to 500 km/s range. The next day, a non-earth-directed CME emerged from the east limb after a C3 flare at 0745Z from Region 1467 (N12, L=331,class/area=Dso/50). A Type II radio sweep (estimated shock velocity of 1029 km/s) announced the departure of this CME. CME production continued onWednesday when Region 1460 produced a C1 x-ray flare/CME at 25/2242Z and Region 1465 followed with a C1 x-ray flare/CME at 26/1723Z. Several non-earth-directed CMEs were observed emerging from the SW limb on 26-27 April. They all originated from old Region 1462 (S25, L=139, class/area=Dho/300) which rotated off the visible disk on the 24th.
A16 degree filament eruption was observed in SDO/AIA 304 imagery at 28/1045Z. During the eruption, the SE to NW oriented filament was centered near S32W33. LASCO/C2 imagery captured a subsequent slow-moving, non-earth-directed CME emerging from the SW limb at 28/1224Z. GONG H-alpha and SDO/AIA 304 imagery depicted a filament eruption along a six degree long channel centered near N06E36, just to the SE of Region 1467. This eruption occurred between 28/1800 -

2000Z with several CMEs observed during the period.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit reached high levels on 25 April and remained at mostly high levels through the rest of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to major storm levels during the week. On 23/0200Z, data from the ACE spacecraft indicated the arrival of a CME from 19 April. Solar wind speed increased from 350 to 400 km/s and the total IMF approached 18 nT. The Boulder magnetometer recorded a 31 nT sudden impulse at 23/0325Z. Active to minor storm levels followed. IMF Bz at the ACE spacecraft lurked in the -10 to -15 nt range for 12 hours beginning around 23/16Z. By 24 April, activity reached major storm levles at mid latitudes during the 00-03Z period as effects from the CME were compounded by the arrival of a coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS) around 0200Z. On the 25th, activity at high latitudes reached severe storm levels during the 06-09Z synoptic period. The high speed stream peaked near 777 km/s on the 25th around 19Z then began a steady decline. Geomagnetic field activity subsided to unsettled levels on 27 April and quiet levels on 28-29 April. Late on the 27th, a slight bump in the wind speed at ACE suggested the arrival of the remnants of the CME from 23 April, however the geomagnetic field response was muted.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
30 April - 26 May 2012

Solar activity is expected to be low with a chance for moderate events through the forecast period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levles 30 April, 11-14 May and 23-26 May.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be quiet with the exception of active periods on 9-11 May and 20-23 May associated with recurrent coronal hole high speed streams.

Pretty quiet over here in the last few weeks . The only unusual murder this year (relatively speaking) was due to a non-paying roommate ,whose partly dismembered body was stuffed in a kitchen fridge... Pretty stern warning to others,I guess...

Radio Australia did a frequency shuffle a week or two ago.

Anybody found good frequencies for West Coast of North America in the morning?

9710 seems to be gone, and 11880 now comes in at least an hour earlier but is getting stepped on at 9 AM PDT. 7240 is still there, but propagation isn't good this time of year.

So now Western Washington is now weirder than California?

Survivalist whack job shoots the family dog and cat, and wife and daughter. And splashed gas around the house and then heads for his bunker in the woods. But the fire department got there too soon and the sheriff got some pictures off his computer (that didn't burn up) indicating the rough location of his 8 year project. So they helicopter in the SWAT team, (some of whom ended up getting treated for hypothermia/exposure), and they found him by smelling the woodsmoke. At which time he blew his brains out.

All the scriptwriters for CSI have to do is change the names.

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including
| be rated 250 volts or higher.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

1604. The Prophecies of Muhammad

The Prophecies of Muhammad

One of the ways in which a person proves his prophethood is honesty, whether it be in regards to incidents in the past, in their everyday life, or things to come in the future. In addition to the Quran, there are many sayings of Prophet Muhammad which contain prophecies he made in his lifetime dealing with near and distant future. Some of them have come true, others await fulfillment. Hudhaifah, a disciple of Prophet Muhammad, tells us:

“The Prophet once delivered a speech in front of us wherein he mentioned everything [all the signs] that would happen till the Final Hour without leaving anything. Some of us remembered it and some forgot it. After that speech, I used to see events taking place which were referred to in that speech, but I had forgotten them before their occurrence. Then I would recognize such events as a man recognizes another man who has been absent and then sees and recognizes him.” (Saheeh Al-Bukhari)

There are at least 160 known and confirmed prophecies of Prophet Muhammad which were fulfilled in his lifetime and the first generation after him.[1] We will mention some here.

(1) Preceding the Battle of Badr, the first and decisive confrontation with pagan Meccans in the second year of migration from Mecca in 623 CE, Prophet Muhammad foretold the precise spot every pagan Meccan soldier would fall. Those who witnessed the battle saw the prophecy come true with their own eyes.[2]

(2) Prophet Muhammad prophesized the Battle of the Confederates (al-Ahzab) would be the last invasion the tribe of Quraish (the pagan Meccans) would launch against the Muslims. It was fought in the fifth year of migration, 626 CE and was the last military conflict between the two sides. All Meccans embraced Islam after a few years.[3]

(3) The Prophet informed his daughter, Fatima, that she would be the first member of his family to die after him. There are two prophecies in one: Fatima will outlive her father; Fatima will be the first member of his household to die after him. Both were fulfilled.[4]

(4) The Prophet Muhammad prophesized Jerusalem would be conquered after his death.[5] The prophecy was fulfilled when, according to Encyclopedia Britannica: “In 638 the Muslim Caliph, Umar I, entered Jerusalem.”[6]

(5) The Prophet Muhammad prophesized the conquest of Persia.[7] It was conquered by Umar's commander, Sa'ad bin Abi Waqqas. In the words of Encyclopedia Britannica:

"…raids into Sasanian territory were quickly taken up by Muhammad's Caliphs, or deputies, at Medina - Abu Bakr and Umar ibn al-Khattab… an Arab victory at Al-Qadisiyyah in 636/637 was followed by the sack of the Sasanian winter capital at Ctesiphon on the Tigris. The Battle of Nahavand in 642 completed the Sasanids' vanquishment."[8]

(6) The Prophet Muhammad prophesized the conquest of Egypt.[9] In the words of Encyclopedia Britannica:

"Amr… undertook the invasion in 639 with a small army of some 4,000 men (later reinforced). With what seems astonishing speed the Byzantine forces were routed and had withdrawn from Egypt by 642… Various explanations have been given for the speed with which the conquest was achieved."[10]

(7) The Prophet foretold confrontation with the Turks.[11] The first conflict took place in the caliphate of Umar in 22 AH.[12]

(8) The Prophet foretold the first maritime battle to be undertaken by Muslims would be witnessed by Umm Haram, the first woman to participate in a naval expedition. He also prophesied the first assault on Constantinople.[13]

The first maritime battle in Muslim history was in 28 AH in the rule of Mu'awiya. It was witnessed by Umm Haram as foretold by Prophet Muhammad, and Yazid ibn Mu'awiya led the first attack on Constantinople in 52 AH.[14]

(9) The prophecy that Rome, Persia, and Yemen will be conquered was made during the Battle of Confederates in 626 CE,[15] under extreme circumstances, as is described by the Quran:

"[Remember] when they came at you from above you and from below you, and when eyes shifted [in fear], and hearts reached the throats and you assumed about God [various] assumptions. There, the believers were tested and shaken with a severe shaking. And [remember] when the hypocrites and those in whose hearts is disease said, 'God and His Messenger did not promise us except delusion.'" (Quran 33:10-12)

(10) Prophet Muhammad prophesized an imposter claiming to speak in the name of God would be killed at the hands of a righteous man in Muhammad's lifetime.[16] Al-Aswad al-Ansi, an imposter prophet in Yemen, was killed in the Prophet's lifetime by Fayruz al-Daylami.[17]

There are at least an additional 28 prophecies pertaining to the end times which are awaiting fulfillment.

Indeed these well-documented prophecies are clear proofs of the Prophethood of Muhammad, may the mercy and blessings of God be upon him. There is no possible way that the Prophet could have knowledge of these incidents except if it were inspired by God Himself, all in order to further prove the authenticity of the Muhammad, that he was not an imposter, but rather a Prophet raised by God to deliver humanity from Hellfire.

Just had this discussion on one of the broadcast boards.

Streaming audio, for the most part, is a trivial usage matter. You can stream radio stations' audio all day, every day for the month, on an iPhone, and not hit your cellular usage cap. On wi-fi, you'll never notice it.

The lowest plan on ATT is 300Mb/mo. I've barely gotten to 200Mb, and I monitor stations I serve constantly.

The next ATT plan, for $10 more per month is 3GB. Audio streaming is down in the noise on that plan. And ATT is the stingiest of the cellular carriers.

Now, as for cable...Comcast's cap is pretty tall. It will accomodate your usage, plus movies, and tv streaming. You can stream radio audio about 24/7 without hitting your cap.

This morning I heard Chinese instrumental music at this freq. during these times. Only music, no voice transmissions. Is this Central People's BS in Beijing transmitting to Taiwan on an alternative freq.
from their usual 15.880Mhz? It was quite loud throughout the 2 hours that I logged it. Very tinny instrument in the mix, probably a Chinese So-Na (trumpet.)

I was house bound at one time but I prayed real hard to Brother Stare and he helped me. Now me and Kevin Strom are fighting hard to stop the Jews before they own this country.

Kevin was convicted of seeking to coerce a 10-year-old into a sexual relationship but don't you believe it, he was set up and its normal to want to have sex with a ten year old anyways!

Kevin Arnold Strom was busy. See, me and Kevin, we got it all figured out, and he was not guilty of seeking to coerce a 10-year-old into a sexual relationship, he was just doing what God told him too do!

Kevin Alfred Strom was convicted of child pornography to but dont you believe it, he was set up like when a cop plants drugs on a suspect, the fifty thousand child pornography pitchers were sent by a Jew to him to set him up!

So dont worry about who is porclaiming, he is better than you, and brother

You got off to a bad start here. You know that you exist because of the various experiences you have, but "knowing" you exist and "proving" you exist are two very different things. The fact that we know that we exist and that our existence seems obvious, even undeniable, to us does not constitute a proof of any kind, and it arguably eliminates the need for any kind of "proof".

The left now has a virtual stranglehold on the self-centered, whose personal pleasure and egocentrism is the primary driving force in their lives. They are now completely in the thrall of the left, but what has this blind loyalty wrought?

America's Useful Idiots
By Steve McCann

Many years ago, a phrase was coined by the leaders of the Soviet Union to describe those in the West who naively promoted the cause of Russian Communism when in reality they were held in contempt and were being cynically used by the Soviet hierarchy. The term "useful idiot" more than ever applies to a vast swath of citizens in the United States who have been cynically used by the hardcore left for a cause they are unwilling to understand.

Among the mysteries confronting those of us who have immigrated to the United States from countries that have experienced the devastating outcome of socialist/Marxist ideology is why seemingly successful and educated people could be so easily swayed to support those whose end-game is to transform the country into a socialist "utopia" and to control the day-to-day lives of all Americans. Among these "useful idiots" are a seeming majority of the Jewish population as well as many in business, and nearly all in entertainment and the media.

The answer appears to be that despite the hardcore left accounting for less than 20% of the population, their influence extends far beyond thanks to the apparent inability of their peripheral supporters to use any modicum of reasoning -- as the left in the United States has been able to identify and manipulate those susceptible to emotional arguments.

Traditionally, the age-old Marxist strategy of fomenting class warfare and demonizing capitalism has been an effective tactic with those in the lower-income and education strata, who can be easily swayed to blame others for their perceived misfortune. However, in a nation, such as the United States, which has experienced great peace and prosperity for nearly seven decades and whose population is overwhelmingly middle-class, this argument alone cannot sway a sufficient number to support the ascension of those dedicated to socialist/Marxist ideology.

Therefore, while still using the class-warfare dialog to keep the lower classes stirred up, the left has, beginning in the 1930s but accelerating in the 1960s, combined class warfare with the promotion of guilt for one's success and falsely portraying their ideological enemies as being intolerant extremists whose single-minded determination is to limit and control everyone's lifestyle, and who are at their core virulent racists. Yet leftists are just what they accuse their opponents of being.

The tactic of fomenting guilt for one's success is a codicil to overt class warfare. The argument begins with the benign assertion that in a nation this wealthy, surely everyone can be guaranteed a minimal level of support at the taxpayers' expense. Particularly wealthy taxpayers should be willing to part with a "fair share" of their income (as defined by the left) in order to assuage their guilt for living in a country that "facilitated" their becoming rich. Not desiring to be branded as insensitive or evil, many simply acquiesced to this not-so-subtle extortion. Further, in an attempt to buy peace, many contributed vast sums of money to the Democratic Party -- now dominated by the far left.

The management of many large corporations as well as numerous successful business owners, entrepreneurs, and inheritors of wealth refused to understand that as in all protection rackets, there is never an end to the demand for payment. Additionally, these dupes were funding a political party whose end-game was to destroy the system that made them successful in the first place. All the while the money being siphoned out of the economy by the government in order to establish a so-called "safety net" was being used to create an ever-expanding dependent class who would vote to keep the left in power.

The Obama administration represents the culmination of this process, as leftists have, through an avalanche of mandates, regulations, and laws, begun weaving a suffocating web around the American free market, as they assume complete control of the economy. Firmly in their clutches will be those who fall into the ever-changing definition of rich and successful.

In the 1960s, America experienced a social revolution against historical and societal norms. An era of peace and prosperity unprecedented in the history of mankind was underway, allowing a new generation to focus on hedonistic pursuits, self-aggrandizement, and a search for so-called "meaning" in their lives. Traditions, based on the religious foundation of the country and the societal mores that sprang from them, came to be viewed as standing in the way of allowing the population to experience absolute freedom.

Coupled with the Johnson administration's mishandling of the Vietnam War, a broad movement began. The true believers of the left promptly injected themselves into this landscape, proclaiming to the gullible that not only was the United States waging an unjust war, but the U.S. was by its nature a repressive country. The siren song of a society wherein all are treated fairly and there are no absolutes found eager ears.

In short order, the left began to portray their political adversaries as intolerant religious zealots whose primary objective was to deny personal freedom and cast a beady eye toward whatever was happening in the bedroom. An unfettered lifestyle as well as being part of the in-crowd is of paramount importance to not only the vast majority of those in the entertainment and media arena, but also many in the general population. They were willing cast aside any disbelief and wholeheartedly swallow the premise that only the political left or the "progressives" could protect them from this narrow-minded right-wing horde.

This attitude was further entrenched when many conservatives and the religious community began to organize and rightly object to abortion on demand and the concomitant coarsening of the culture. The left now had a virtual stranglehold on the self-centered, whose personal pleasure and egocentrism were the primary driving forces in their lives. They were now completely in the thrall of the left, but what has this blind loyalty wrought?

A cursory examination of those nations that fell under the control of socialist/Marxist ideology reveals that among the first actions the new regimes institute is to put in place laws to greatly limit personal freedom as a prerequisite in subjugating the populace.

The passage of ObamaCare is not a health care plan; rather, it is a blueprint to allow the government to control the day-to-day lives of all Americans, and under the guise of budgetary expediency, the bureaucrats in Washington can and eventually will declare any behavior they choose unacceptable. Meanwhile, Barack Obama and his administration have been busily issuing edicts and regulations aimed at telling the American people what food they can eat, what medicines they can take, what cars they can drive, what houses they can live in, and in due course what they can do in their bedrooms.

One of the most consistent supporters of the Democratic Party is the Jewish population, as the Party has been portrayed over many decades as the defender of the downtrodden and in recent years a bulwark against the supposed racist fanatics on the right. However, this is a party now dominated and controlled by hardcore leftists, many of whom are virulently anti-Semitic and opposed to the state of Israel. A hallmark of all socialist/Marxist regimes is discrimination against and persecution of minorities, in particular the Jews.

That history coupled with the policies of the Obama administration in the Middle East, the Democrats' class-warfare tactics, the past and present associates of the president, and the anti-Semitic rhetoric of many on the left should alarm the American Jewish citizenry and cause them to cast a wary eye toward the party they have blindly supported over many decades. Unfortunately, the desire to believe that the worst could never happen seems to have permeated the psyche of a people whose history should serve as a cautionary tale as they continue to vote for and financially support a party that views them with disdain.

Barack Obama would not be occupying the Oval Office if it were not for the people over the past sixty years who have blindly supported those who have lied to them. The overriding stratagem of socialism/Marxism is "the ends justify the means" -- thus, no lie is too big to tell, no promise too outrageous to promote, and no tactic out of bounds. The overall strategy of the Obama re-election team confirms this mindset as it conducts a demagogic campaign based solely on emotional appeals to that part of the population its operatives consider "useful idiots."

Those who thoughtlessly supported the left in America over the years are beginning to reap what they have sown. Unfortunately so is the rest of the population.

Likely its a jammer (also known as the firedrake) from mainland China covering the 100 watt station from Taiwan which is scheduled on this frequency.

A proof is a line of reasoning. It has premisses that logically imply (one hopes) a particular conclusion. Physical reality is....physical reality.

The file is zipped. You need Winzip installed to unpak the file and save it.

Used to list China as the target for the Taiwan station. No target listed for a12 but antenna is listed as ND (non-directional).

You're mistakenly assuming they know how to start a fire.

A year ago, our hero had to go the hospital to get a glass jar off his hand. The Doctor finally convinced him to unclench the fistful of ammo so he could slide the jar off.

That was sad enough, yet he repeated the stupidity last month. "But it was my OTHER hand." claimed the Militia leader. The Doctor nodded slowly. He sees thousands of those cases yearly.

The BNRA (Bottle Neck Rights Association) fights all attempts at legislation making slightly wider bottle openings mandatory.

IM (libertarian)O, this is a law made to be broken. I would record (with a small hidden camera) everytime I was stopped for any reason and broadcast the recording on Youtube. I would also encourage others to do the same, and I might even start a bsiness installing the recording equipment on cars. If it happens, especially on either my, or public, property, it is my constitutional right to record it. After all, just what are the police afraid of? The truth? If they don't commit any crimes, then they have nothing to worry about. Don't forget. These guys are our public servants.....

Why are so many Women converting to Islam?

According to "The Plain Truth", February 1984, in its 50 Year Anniversary Issue, quoting from the "World Almanac and Book of Facts 1935" and "Reader's Digest Almanac and Yearbook 1983", between 1934 and 1984.

Christianity increased 47%
World Population increased 136%
Islam increased 235%

100,000 people per year in America alone, are converting to Islam. For every 1 male convert to Islam, 4 females convert to Islam.
They're discovering the FACTS and not basing their decisions on biased media. They realise they deserve to know the complete unadulterated truth.

1. The Bible Convicts Women as the original Sinners (ie. Eve picking from the forbidden tree){Genesis 2:4-3:24}.

The Koran Clarifies it was Adam Not Eve {Koran 7:19-25}

2. The Bible says "The Birth of a Daughter is a loss" {Ecclesiasticus 22:3}.

The Koran says both are an Equal Blessing {Koran 42:49}

3. The Bible forbids women from speaking in church {I Corinthians 14:34-35}.

The Koran says women can argue with the Prophet {58:1}

4. In the Bible, divorced Women are Labeled as an Adulteress, not men {Matthew 5:31-32}

The Koran does Not have Biblical double standards{Koran 30:21}

5. In The Bible, widows and sisters do not inherit Any property or wealth, only men do {Numbers 27:1-11}

The Koran abolished this male greed {Koran 4:22} and God protects all.

6. The Bible Allows Multiple Wives {I Kings 11:3}

In The Koran, God limits the number to 4 only under certain situations (with the wife's permission)and prefers you marry only one wife {Koran 4:3} The Koran gives the woman the right to choose who to marry.

7. "If a man happens to meet a virgin who is not pledged to be married and rapes her and they are discovered, he shall pay the girl's father fifty shekels of silver. He must marry the girl, for he has violated her. He can never divorce her as long as he lives" {Deuteronomy 22:28-30}

One must ask a simple question here, who is really punished, the man who raped the woman or the woman who was raped? According to the Bible, you have to spend the rest of your life with the man who raped you.

The Prophet Muhammad Says {Volume 9, Book 86, Number 101} Narrated by Aisha:"It is essential to have the consent of a virgin (for the marriage)".

Would the Non-Muslim men reading this prefer the Women they know to be Christian or Muslim?

8. The Bible also asks women to wear veils as in Islam {I Corinthians 11:3-10}

9. Women were given rights to Vote less than a 100 years ago in the (US), while the Koran gave women voting rights almost 1,500 years ago.

The answer must be "existence", assuming that knowledge/understanding is itself something that exists.

OK, Gotcha. I would postulate that such a proof could use existence as a premise, but maybe this is belaboring the point.

I gotta hand to it to you, you keep coming up with the damndest bullshit that even tops my stuff.

No it is not illegal to videotape an officer performing his duty in public.
When they say it is illegal, have them identify the law. I'll bet they won't do it.
And there certainly is no law preventing anyone to broacast an officer's conversation.

Why? There's this little thing known as "Freedom of speech", for starters.

As of some time on the night of April 30, AFN Korea ceased programming, leaving only a still of the WTC1 workers putting in the girder that made the edifice the tallest building in NYC. That still (with no audio) remained until early yesterday afternoon, at which time they threw the switch and killed the signals. This marks the last OTA television signal for AFRTS anywhere in the world. AFN Korea was the last such system extant, as Korea is the last country still using the NTSC television system. All other NTSC broadcasts will end in Korea sometime in 2014. AFN has no intention of installing ATSC HDTV plants, and will instead continue serving troops, contractors and their families using base cable systems and DTS/DTH satellite.

AFN Korea plants covered bases in Dongducheon, Uijeongbu, Seoul, Osan, Pyeongtaek, Daegu, Chinhae and Busan, mostly using low power UHF transmitters. I'll post a link to the still I recorded (not great quality, I long ago disconnected my UHF antenna for the local AFN channel, so was using just a Sony Hi-8 TV-recorder off it's own antenna.

If they are in public, there is a diminished expectation of privacy.
An officer filmed giving a citation to a driver, for whatever reason, shouldn't expect his actions are private.

Yes and no. It would depend on the context.
A simple speeding ticket probably could be broadcast. If it's something that could harm an investigation, probably not.

>Why? There's this little thing known as "Freedom of speech", for starters.

How does that apply?

hi,

The Quran on Deep Seas and Internal Waves

God has said in the Quran:

“Or (the unbelievers’ state) is like the darkness in a deep sea. It is covered by waves, above which are waves, above which are clouds. Darknesses, one above another. If a man stretches out his hand, he cannot see it....” (Quran 24:40)

This verse mentions the darkness found in deep seas and oceans, where if a man stretches out his hand, he cannot see it. The darkness in deep seas and oceans is found around a depth of 200 meters and below. At this depth, there is almost no light (see figure 1). Below a depth of 1000 meters there is no light at all.[1] Human beings are not able to dive more than forty meters without the aid of submarines or special equipment. Human beings cannot survive unaided in the deep dark part of the oceans, such as at a depth of 200 meters.

This is why I like to keep one of those crank up flashlights around the house. No batteries required. The LED bulbs last a really long time and put out a reasonable amount of light. Just turn the crank for a while and you get a good, steady beam of light, certainly bright enough to see your hand by.

After reflecting on all of the above, how could we look to the universe above us through a telescope or observe the cells in a microscope and then think all of this came about as a result of a "god"? So, what you say for the "big bang" you can say for "god" also.

The big difference between "big bang" approach and "god" approach is that "big bang" people leave us free and "god" people tries to limit this. So I go for "big bang".

Wouldn't broadcasting an officer's conversation be considered 'disclosing the contents of a radio transmission to a third party'? It always was a part of the communications act. I guess it would apply to video 'broadcasts' also.

True. The Classical religion of our ancestors and their kin was closer to reality in that, at least in its later years, it was openly and freely allowed to be interpreted by bards and poets and philosophers, and made no claim to have "inerrant texts" or "infallible truths."

It may seem paradoxical to those used to one of the alien Abrahamic faiths, but _not_ having a "holy book" with pretended "absolute truth" in it actually made the religion _more_ truthful and less in conflict with science and the observed facts.

Pythagoras went further. He said that mathematics, numbers, and physical axioms were the only true word of God. As they cannot be faked and are inherent in the structure of the Universe, and, as we now know, are the basis of the genetic structure of all life and therefore of all consciousness, I think he was on to something.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

hi,

Quran and Logic

What proves that the Qur'an is the Word of God? What proves that the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) did not write it?

This claim was studied and analyzed carefully in http://Rasoulallah.net

The answer to such claim is divided into two parts:

Logical answer and scientific answer.

Both aspects of logic and science are the qualities that combine and distinguish humans.

In the following videos we address those who disagree through rational and scientific methods.

Poor to fair USB signal in the eastern US, but mostly copyable.

Liberty Net: April 28, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

DESPITE THE FALLING of a large tree on Marty, N2IRJï¿½s Beverage receiving antenna, repairs were made in good time and the antenna was up and running fast, and served the net and the phone patch participants well. Next week, a new alternate N2IRJ transmitting antenna will be put into service!

Since 1974, the Liberty Net has been the place for independent-thinking radio amateurs to congregate and share ideas. Itï¿½s on every Saturday night at 10PM, somewhere in the upper 50 kHz of the 75 meter ï¿½phone band.

Here are some of the ideas introduced and debated during this weekï¿½s session:

ï¿½ One name to watch in European politics is Franceï¿½s Marine Le Pen, who has revitalized the anti-banker, pro-freedom, and pro-self-determination forces there. Some call her the ï¿½Ron Paul of France.ï¿½ (18 minutes)

ï¿½ Good news department: When an agent of the regimeï¿½s ï¿½Food and Drug Administrationï¿½ tried to prevent an Amish farmer from selling his milk in Indiana recently, the local sheriff stated that the agent had better stay away from the farmer and his property ï¿½ or face arrest. In Texas, another patriotic sheriff stated that federal agents would be arrested if they seized guns for any reason from citizens of his county. (35 minutes)

ï¿½ When the Black Panthers openly put a bounty on a manï¿½s head, why are there no legal consequences for them? If the races were reversed, you can bet things would be different. (40 minutes)

ï¿½ Banks essentially have a license to print money, so things have to be really bad for them to fail ï¿½ yet five US banks have failed since Spring Break alone. (45 minutes)

ï¿½ Even though immigrants are pouring into Germany at an alarming rate, the countryï¿½s population is nevertheless falling ï¿½ which means that the native White population there is in severe decline and, like many other White peoples, is literally facing extinction. (51 minutes)

ï¿½ Huge numbers of illegal Mestizo immigrants are taking advantage of an IRS rule that lets each of them get tens of thousands of dollars in ï¿½refundsï¿½ for children, nieces, and nephews ï¿½ even if these relatives live in Mexico or are even fictional ï¿½ and even if the illegals never paid a dime in taxes to begin with. The IRS is doing exactly nothing about it. The total amount paid is now estimated at $5 billion. (56 minutes)

ï¿½ Something very strange is going on in the highest echelons of Washington regime: Both its Republican and Democratic factions are currying favor with, and trying to co-opt, Muslim groups, even quite radical ones, while at the same time they are making bloody war on the Muslimsï¿½ relatives overseas. The recent behavior of Grover Norquist, Karl Rove, and Jack Abramoff bear study in this regard, as does the Web site ï¿½The Muslim Brotherhood in America.ï¿½ (1 hour 3 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s an odd coincidence ï¿½ if it is a coincidence ï¿½ that the Bush family and the Bin Laden family, and the Bush family and the Hinckley family, were friends. (1 hour 20 minutes)

ï¿½ A new and rather simple system has been developed by Russia to detect the Washington regimeï¿½s ï¿½stealth aircraftï¿½ which are (very expensively) designed to absorb radar signals. The detector simply senses cell telephone signals reflected off the killer planes. (1 hour 28 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net on an open frequency around ï¿½ usually well above ï¿½ 3950 kHz every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. You can also listen live on the Internet or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted right here at http://3950.net every week.

The complete net recording is posted at the very top of the right column (under ï¿½Liberty Net Audioï¿½) here on http://3950.net ï¿½ usually on the Sunday immediately following the net, so look for it there if youï¿½d like to listen or download after the net has signed off. The articles and summaries (like this one, found in the center column) show up around a week later.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR and all participants for making this extraordinary net possible ï¿½ and please check in!

letters being sent to hams telling them that they are the source of interference to this new radar system even if they or their repeaters have not been on 23 centimeters in years.

it's the same thing as hoas. There were hoas who knew the ham did not have any radios or any antennas at all, yet knew he was licensed as a ham by the fcc, sso complained that his mere presence in the neighborhood caused radio frequency interference to all sorts of things in the properties of all the homes in the hoa, including one hoa resident who complained he kept hearing both sides of the ham's conversations coming out of his toilet 24/7 just because of the mere presence of the ham radio operator being in the neighborhood (without any radios or antennas at all).

I have recently learned of a HOA group who have blamed their diarrhea problems on the RF that is allegedly being sent from one of their neighboring Amateur Radio operators.
The group is stating that their collective problems with runny bowels is caused by a local Amateur Radio operator who transmits on various UHF frequencies.
The spokesperson said that they grouped together and kept track of their bowel movements and timed them, and that their bowel movements were most active during the evening hours when the Ham Op was on the air.
The group maintains that their bowel movements are "loose and liquid" in the evening hours, but that during the morning hours, when the Amateur is asleep, that their bowels exhude, "large and solid masses with little or no discomfort."
This concerned group has contacted several city officials and have made their issues known. One city official seemingly scoffed at their concerns and alleged that the group "was full of it."

The group is now considering whether or not to take their case to the FCC but lack funding to do so.

The market place has spoken...

And while we are on the subject, K-Mart bought and owns Sears.

What's wrong with that, you ask?

Well, lemme tell ya.

If you recall, K-Mart declared bankruptcy and all the K-Mart stock became -worthless-, went to zero. They claimed they were broke. And yet, just awhile later, they mysteriously found enough money to buy the entire Sears chain.

When Sears leaves Jackson, maybe they can take K-Mart with them.

(and before you ask, no, I never owned any Sears or K-Mart stock)

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
30 April - 06 May 2012

Solar activity was moderate. The week was dominated by low level C-class x-ray activity from Regions 1469 (S23, L=335, class/area Eso/140 on 02 May) and 1471 (S21, L=276, class/area=Eho/320 on 02 May) until 05 May. Then, Region 1476 (N10, L=188, class/are=Fhi/760 on 06 May) rotated onto the visible disk and produced three impulsive M-class flares in approximately 12 hours. The largest of these was an M1/Sn at 05/1323Z. Only one M1/1n flare was observed the following day, also from Region 1476, at 06/1747Z.

Several coronal mass ejections (CMEs) were observed during the period, although only three were deemed to be potentially earth-directed. The first of the three occurred on 04 May and was observed in STEREO-Ahead COR2 coronagraph imagery around 0309Z. The second was associated with a C1 flare from Region 1469 at 04/2356Z. The third was associated with a long duration C2/Sf flare from Region 1470 (S15, L=286, class/area=Cro/30 on 05 May) at 05/0639Z and evidence of the eruption was observed in SDO AIA imagery at 05/0600 UTC. No significant radio emissions were observed with any of the CMEs.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels (>1000 pfu) for the first three days (30 April-02 May). After a return to normal background levels on 03-04 May, flux reached moderate levels on 05 and 06 May.

Geomagnetic field activity was at predominantly quiet levels all week. Unsettled levels occurred late on 02 May into early 03 May associated with a prolonged period of negative Bz and again late on 03 May in response to a solar sector boundary change. Solar wind speed measured at the ACE spacecraft ranged from 300-400 km/s throughout the week.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
07 May - 02 June 2012

Solar activity is expected to be low to moderate as Region 1476 makes its way across the visible solar disk.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to reach high levels on 11-14 May and again on 23-29 May in response to recurrent coronal hole high speed wind streams.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin at unsettled levels for 07-08 May in response to a solar sector boundary crossing and CME arrival. The arrival of a recurrent coronal hole high speed stream will bring active levels on 09-11 May. After a brief return to quiet levels, unsettled conditions are expected in response to another coronal hole high speed stream on 14-15 May. Mostly quiet levels are then forecast until 19 May when unsettled to active conditions are expected to accompany the arrival of a coronal hole high speed stream. Active levels will persisit through 23 May followed by a return to quiet conditions through the end of the period.

This is currently in the courts. And it's very much under test in the courts in Chicago, where such an ordinance WAS passed recently.

Actually, rebroadcast of anyone's conversation without their knowledge and consent is illegal, according to the regulations of many radio services. And, recording the voice of anyone without their consent is illegal in many states. You can video them, but you can't capture the audio. That's why security cameras are silent.

And, again, it's currently under court test for live action audio/video of police activities to be broadcast without consent.

> Why? There's this little thing known as "Freedom of speech", for starters.

You may wish to review that Amendment, for starters. "Freedom of Speech" only refers to the ability of the citizen to speak out against the government without the government striking back in petty retribution. It does not confer a consequence free right to publicly disseminate someone else's speech without permission. "Freedom of Speech" also refers ONLY to the government not attempting to silence criticism of the government.

But considering several persons in Congress, including, to name only one, Senator Barbara Boxer calling for the censure, defunding, and summary termination from their positions, of meteorologists who do not sign onto the Global Warming Agenda; and the current program of silencing, isolation, and revocation of permit for protests in Chicago related to the NATO conference, you may wish to speak your protests to your representatives before 'Freedom of Speech" is a noble memory of a day before The Tyranny.

Funny thing - at least here in California, the BBC and IBB/BBG relay broadcasts are always a better signal than RTs own broadcasts to North America. Something about the timing and propagation, I guess.

Same thing here. Nakhon Sawan and Iranawila relays are usually the strongest. Yesterday however the Ekala transmission in English from SriLanka was fairly strong for a short time before 0200.

There was a lot of jamming going on yesterday. The Firedrake was on quite a few frequencies. Even heard a bubble jammer running over one 500 KW broadcaster.

Lew Dickey is no stranger to losing money. In fact, his track record is one of stations not performing well, but with cut expenses, manages to make a tidy profit despite low ratings, and declining ratings.

Neither has Lew Dickey ever been married to Truth. He says a lot of things that are neither true, nor realistic. Ask any of his former employees.

Very few advertisers buying Rush actually pulled their schedules. No one on the network did. A few sustainers -- advertisers dropped into open slots by the network for run-of-schedule, or daypart buys, but not actually purchasing the show -- got rescheduled. And a few advertising agencies issued embargo notices that included Rush, just as they had Stern and Hannity, Savage and others for years. But the majority of the 'boycotting' advertisers never bought Rush in the first place. They simply insisted that their ROS or daypart buys don't run during Rush. Traffic can easily drop other spots into those slots, and Sales can easily bring additional advertisers on stream who will take those slots.

If the station loses money, it's because they're not doing their job. If he's genuinely lost millions, then he would replace both his traffic managers and his sales reps.

This story is wildly deceptive because it implies that sponsorships are leaving Rush in droves. Which is not the case.

And bear in mind that Dickey has a vested interest in making the claim that Rush is a liability, because he owns the competition, Mike Huckabee, whom he wants to see in that slot at all his stations. Claiming revenue loss is the fastest way to that end.

"These are not the scandals you're looking for."

From Yahoo News.

By Eric Pfeiffer

In a controversial decision that is already sparking debate around the country, the New York Court of Appeals ruled on Tuesday that viewing child pornography online is not a crime.

"The purposeful viewing of child pornography on the internet is now legal in New York," Senior Judge Carmen Beauchamp Ciparick wrote in a majority decision for the court.

The decision came after Marist College professor James D. Kent was sentenced to prison in August 2009 after more than 100 images of child pornography were found on his computer's cache.

Whenever someone views an image online, a copy of the image's data is saved in the computer's memory cache.

The ruling attempts to distinguish between individuals who see an image of child pornography online versus those who actively download and store such images, MSNBC reports. And in this case, it was ruled that a computer's image cache is not the same as actively choosing to download and save an image.

"Merely viewing Web images of child pornography does not, absent other proof, constitute either possession or procurement within the meaning of our Penal Law," Ciparick wrote in the decision.

See a copy of the court's full ruling on the child pornography decision.

The court said it must be up to the legislature, not the courts, to determine what the appropriate response should be to those viewing images of child pornography without actually storing them. Currently, New York's legislature has no laws deeming such action criminal.

As The Atlantic Wire notes, under current New York law, "it is illegal to create, possess, distribute, promote or facilitate child pornography." But that leaves out one critical distinction, as Judge Ciparick stated in the court's decision.

"[S]ome affirmative act is required (printing, saving, downloading, etc.) to show that defendant in fact exercised dominion and control over the images that were on his screen," Ciparick wrote. "To hold otherwise, would extend the reach of (state law) to conductï¿½viewingï¿½that our Legislature has not deemed criminal."

The case originated when Kent brought his computer in to be checked for viruses, complaining that it was running slowly. He has subsequently denied downloading the images himself.

Firedrake is also known as Firedragon or Fire Dragon.

However, if the OP heard it for 2 solid hours without break he was not hearing Firedrake.

The Firedrake jammer transmitters go offline at the top of each hour. Some variable time later it comes back online, when it comes back on it can be on the same frequencies as the previous hour or it can be on new frequencies, or some mixture of new and old. This variable time when the transmitters are off is anything from 4 to 25 minutes. The Firedrake can be (normally is) on multiple frequencies at one time, I have seen up to 8 active at a time and have been told up to 12 can be active. When it comes back online after the top of the hour pause it comes on one frequency at a time, often from highest to lowest.

For example, this morning, May 11, 2012, all Firedrakes transmitters went offline at 1400 UTC. They came back on in the following order:

Time (UTC) Frequency (kHz)
1405:27 15605
1411:05 9985
1414:07 15490
1416:14 14700
1418:46 13130
1420:13 12300
1420:42 14800

The times I noted are the times the carriers came online. Often the carrier comes up for a few seconds before the audio is switched in. The audio of all Firedrake transmitters are in sync, so that the same notes are struck at the same time on all frequencies, and it is thought the audio originates via a satellite feed.

The reason for the pause at the top of the hour is unknown, however it is my opinion this is what is called "look through" when talking about jammers.

A jammer that is active covers, by design, the signal it is jamming. This means the source of the jammer can not be sure if the signal it is trying to jam is still active or not. A well designed and reactive jammer will periodically pause jamming to see if the target signal is still on the air. If a jammer does not do this the target signal can use a technique of coming up initially on freq A, waiting for the jammer to become active, and then switch to freq B, knowing the jammer will not follow it.

Firedrake does not pause to look through, but it does normally come on to jam a frequency only after the target signal has been on the air for many minutes. The variable nature of the time it takes the transmitters to come back online and the fact it comes back on one frequency at a time indicates to me the entire process might be manual.

A couple of the stations Firedrake jams have, in the past, taken advantage of this pause to get out announcements of upcoming frequency changes and important news before the jammer comes on.

I have very occasionally seen Firedrake jam when no target signal was present that I could find. However this does not happen often and when it does I wonder if the operators are just hitting the freq because they suspect they have no propagation conditions to hear the target. Other nations jammers, such as North Korea and Vietnam, often come on and jam a freq for days even though the target has abandon that freq and moved to another. I get the impression those jammers are just hitting frequencies based on a printed schedule or by direction.

The only rationale I can think of for this stems from the fact that, when you follow a link, you often have no idea where that link is going to take you and it can often take you to places you do not want to go. So, you could click on a link advertising "used truck parts" and end up on some weirdo kiddie porn site, in which case you'll probably end up with disturbing images in your cache.

PLEASE read it.

The Holy Quran , the last revealed Holy book, carries within its holy verses the evidence toits Divine source .Among the many mitacles that the holy Quran contain is the scientific miracles , more than 1400 years ago , The Holy Quran gives scientific facts that have been discovered already and now are scientifically established . When the Holy Quran gives such facts it adds many dimensions to the question of faith in God ; in addition to the faith dimension there is a spiritual dimension that Only Moslems and reasonable non -moslems can feel . The Holy Quran stands in the face of the atheism claims . The other Holy books , being distorted and pregnant with scientific errors that may feed sckepticism , are no longer able to face atheism . Atheism are breeding and taking people away from the right path . The Holy Quran , being the most authenticated book , can be the challanger – No one can believe that a book with such astounding scientific miracles that revealed 1400 years ago can be man-mad . Such facts lead you to believe in God and to believe that the Holy Quran is God's book …it is up to you to decide ……
Now to our scientific miracle The Holy Quran ststes in one of its Holy verses that (iron) we send down from high skies , i.e, it is not formed in the ground . That what science has aleady discovered . Let's read this short verse . God says in the Holy Quran what means "And We sent down iron in which there lies great force and which has many uses for mankind…. (Surat al- Hadid: 25)
Modern astronomical findings have disclosed that the *l of iron found in our world has come down from the giant stars in outer space. The Holy Quran verse used The Arabic word " Anzlna " which could be rendered " and we sent down " . Iron needs so high temperature to be formed ; Professor Armstrong works at NASA, otherwise known as the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, where he is a well-known scientist here. He was asked about Iron and how it was formed. He explained how all the elements in the earth were formed.
He stated that the scientists have come only recently to discover the relevant facts about that formation process. He said that the energy of the early solar system was not sufficient to produce elemental Iron.
In calculating the energy required to form one atom of iron, it was found to be about four times as much as the energy of the entire solar system. In other words, the entire energy of the earth or the moon or the planet Mars or any other planet is not sufficient to form one new atom of iron, even the energy of the entire solar system is not sufficient for that. That is why Professor Armstrong said that the scientists believe that iron is an extraterrestrial that was sent to earth and not formed therein.

Unlike most of *ls , iron needs so high temperature to be formed . such high temperature is found no where in our solar system . "Nova" and "supernova.
Temperature in the Sun is inadequate for the formation of iron. The sun has a surface temperature of 6,000 degrees Celsius, and a core temperature of approximately 20 million degrees. Iron can only be produced in much larger stars than the Sun, where the temperature reaches a few hundred million degrees. When the amount of iron exceeds a certain level in a star, the star can no longer accommodate it, and it eventually explodes in what is called a "nova" or a "supernova." These explosions make it possible for iron to be given off into space.
All this shows that iron did not form on the Earth, but was carried from Supernovas, and was "sent down," as stated in the verse. It is clear that this fact could not have been known in the 7th century, when the Qur'an was revealed. Nevertheless, this fact is related in the Qur'an, the Word of Allah, Who encompasses all things in His infinite knowledge.

Science says that iron and other materials were attracted to the earh when enetered the earth garvity field ; iron fell down on the earth as if it were rain . the earth at that time was like ash , not completely solid as it is now . Iron found its way deep to the core of the earth .
And We sent down iron in which there lies great force and which has many uses for mankind….
what is meant by (and in which there lies great force and which has many uses for mankind….
In his book Nature's Destiny, the well-known microbiologist Michael Denton Of all the ls there is none more essential to life than iron. It is the accumulation of iron in the center of a star which triggers a supernova explosion and the subsequent scattering of the vital atoms of life throughout the cosmos. It was the drawing by gravity of iron atoms to the center of the primeval earth that generated the heat which caused the initial chemical differentiation of the earth, the outgassing of the early atmosphere, and ultimately the formation of the hydrosphere. It is molten iron in the center of the earth which, acting like a gigantic dynamo, generates the earth's magnetic field, which in turn creates the Van Allen radiation belts that shield the earth's surface from destructive high-energy-penetrating cosmic radiation and preserve the crucial ozone layer from cosmic ray destruction…
in this connection the Holy Quran , to show God's blessings , in another verse which implies anew scientific miracle says " And we have made the heavens as a canopy well guarded: yet do they turn away from the Signs which these things (point to)!(Al-Anbyaa :32)
Without the iron atom, there would be no carbon-based life in the cosmos; no supernovae, no heating of the primitive earth, no atmosphere or hydrosphere. There would be no protective magnetic field, no Van Allen radiation belts, no ozone layer, no l to make hemoglobin [in human blood], no l to tame the reactivity of oxygen, and no oxidative *bolism.

The intriguing and intimate relationship between life and iron, between the red color of blood and the dying of some distant star, not only indicates the relevance of this ls to biology but also the biocentricity of the cosmos…
This account clearly indicates the importance of the iron atom. The fact that particular attention is drawn to iron in the Qur'an also emphasises the importance of the element. In addition, there is another hidden truth in the Qur'an which draws attention to the importance of iron: Surat al-Hadid 25, which refers to iron, contains two rather interesting mathematical codes.
"Al- Hadid" is the 57th sura in the Qur'an. The abjad of the word "Al-Hadid" in Arabic, when the numerological values of its letters are added up, is also 57.
The numerological value of the word "hadid" alone is 26. And 26 is the atomic number of iron.
Moreover, iron oxide particles were used in a cancer treatment in recent months and positive developments were observed. A team led by Dr. Andreas Jordan, at the world famous Charité Hospital in Germany, succeeded in destroying cancer cells with this new technique developed for the treatment of cancer-magnetic fluid hyperthermia (high temperature magnetic liquid). As a result of this technique, first performed on the 26-year-old Nikolaus H., no new cancer cells were observed in the patient in the following three months.
This method of treatment can be summarised as follows:
1. A liquid containing iron oxide particles is injected into the tumour by means of a special syringe. These particles spread throughout the tumour cells. This liquid consists of thousands of millions of particles, 1,000 times smaller than the red blood corpuscles, of iron oxide in 1 cm3 that can easily flow through all blood vessels.42
2. The patient is then placed in a machine with a powerful magnetic field.
3. This magnetic field, applied externally, begins to set the iron particles in the tumour in motion. During this time the temperature in the tumour containing the iron oxide particles rises by up to 45 degrees.
In a few minutes the cancer cells, unable to protect themselves from the heat, are either weakened or destroyed. The tumour may then be completely eradicated with subsequent chemotherapy.
43 In this treatment it is only the cancer cells that are affected by the magnetic field, since only they contain the iron oxide particles. The spread of this technique is a major development in the treatment of this potentially lethal disease. In the treatment of such a widespread disease as cancer, the use of the expression "iron in which there lies great force and which has many uses for mankind" (Qur'an, 57:25) in the Qur'an is particularly noteworthy. Indeed, in that verse, theQur’an may be indicating the benefits of iron for human health. (Allah knows best.)

What a pity that people never grasp the true meaning and import of these scientific "revelations" until after scientists have conducted so much research.

Then again, perhaps they do. Is it possible that scientists aren't actually conducting any real research at all and are simply especially attentive readers of the Qur'an? Could it be that they are simply passing off the latter's scientific insights as their own original hypotheses? What scandal!

Liberty Net: May 5, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/05/liberty-net-may-5-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

EVEN THE MUCH-TOUTED revolution-making social media like Facebook are, tragically, increasingly censored by ï¿½gatekeepersï¿½ who want to stifle the discussion of certain ï¿½forbiddenï¿½ topics. Thatï¿½s why itï¿½s important to support multiple platforms for free speech and dissent ï¿½ and one of the premier and longstanding forums for free speech is amateur radioï¿½s Liberty Net, on the air since 1974.

Here are some of the ideas introduced and debated during this weekï¿½s session:

ï¿½ Are recent calls to ï¿½restore tribal landsï¿½ to Amerindians just a sucker play by elitists to balkanize America? Itï¿½s interesting to note, though, that some White American patriots look with favor on the declaration of independence of the Lakotah people, since they believe that anything that reduces the power of the regime in Washington is a good thing ï¿½ and increases the chances for us to regain our independence, too. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ Increasingly, local sheriffs are standing up to the Washington regime and protecting local citizens ï¿½ and their constitutional rights ï¿½ from federal tyranny. One Liberty Net participant suggests that these sheriffs deputize several thousand people in every county to form a strong, almost unchallengeable, pro-freedom force. (41 minutes)

ï¿½ The media want us to assume that all the votes and support abandoned by the Republican shills who have dropped out of the presidential race are, by some unexplainable magic, automatically transferred to chief shill Mitt Romney. But the facts are otherwise: Ron Paulï¿½s support is surging, despite the controlled media blackout. (46 minutes)

ï¿½ The money-men behind Mitt Romney are so worried that their newly-gotten (and, in many cases, ill-gotten) delegates will vote their consciences and support Ron Paul that they are attempting to force them to sign contracts binding them to support the billionairesï¿½ choice. (51 minutes)

ï¿½ More and more countries are following Russiaï¿½s lead and are refusing to participate in the onerous and unjustified sanctions against Iran that are being pushed by Israel and the regime in Washington. To that end, Russia and a consortium of other nations are developing a new bank wire transfer system to replace the one controlled by the New York / London / Tel-Aviv axis. (54 minutes)

ï¿½ In New Mexico, some jurisdictions are shutting off the water and sewer of persons who allegedly failed to pay traffic tickets issued by spy camera devices. (1 hour 4 minutes)

ï¿½ Serious proposals have been introduced into both houses of Congress ï¿½ by the indefatigable Pauls, Ron and Rand ï¿½ to abolish the TSA, and to investigate and abolish the private Federal Reserve bank. (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are we being pressured ï¿½ not just by the usual suspects, but also by large corporations ï¿½ to celebrate ï¿½Cinco de Mayo,ï¿½ a day on which the invaders crossing our southern border celebrate ï¿½Mexican prideï¿½? Whites, on the other hand, are taught that to have any pride in their own heritage is ï¿½racist.ï¿½ (1 hour 17 minutes)

You can find ï¿½ and check in to ï¿½ the Liberty Net every Saturday night starting at 10PM Eastern Time (in recent weeks, the frequency has been well above 3950 SSB ï¿½ we have to be flexible to avoid causing or receiving interference). You can also listen live on the Internet (see the links in the left column of this site) ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Remember that the complete net recording is posted at the very top of the right column (under ï¿½Liberty Net Audioï¿½) here on http://3950.net ï¿½ usually on the Sunday immediately following the net, so look for it there if youï¿½d like to listen at any time after the net has closed. These articles and summaries (found in the center column) show up a few days to a week later.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR and all participants for making this extraordinary net possible.

It would be a win, win, win, win for all involved. Winner #1 the squirrels, winner #2 the ecosystem, winner #3 the shortwave newsgroup and last, and certainly least, winner # 4 would be you.

Consider how much happier you would be finally escaping your vacuous existence. So do the proper thing and make the world a better place - kill yourself.

hey

Miracles in the holy Quran : HONEY: HEALING FOR HUMANKIND

The bee assimilates juices of various kinds of flowers and fruit and forms honey within its body, which it stores in its cells of wax. Only a couple of centuries ago humans came to know that honey comes from the belly of the bee. But this fact was mentioned in the Qur'an 1,400 years ago in the following verse:
"There issues from within their bodies
a drink of varying colours, wherein is healing for men."
[Al-Qur'an 16:69]
We are only now aware that honey has healing properties and is also a mild antiseptic. The Russians would use honey to cover their wounds in World War II. The wound would retain moisture and would leave very little scar tissue. Due to the density of honey, no fungus or bacteria could grow in the wound.
Dramatic improvements were visible in 22 incurable chest and Alzheimer's disease patients at nursing Homes in England who were treated by Sister Carole, a nun, with propolis, a substance which bees produce to seal hives against bacteria.(1)

A person suffering from an allergy of a particular plant may be given honey from that plant so that the person develops resistance to that allergy.
Honey is also rich in fructose and vitamin K.
The knowledge contained in the Qur'an regarding honey, its origin and properties, was discovered centuries after its revelation.

Real HAMS would discuss HAM radio and not political crap.

In my honest opinion - they should abolish all nets, make them illegal, and dissolve the practice of reserving a frequency at a certain time for a certain group of people so they can act like idiots.

I do not see any nets / other then the Maritime Mobile net which serves any purpose other then to reserve a place for idiots to talk.
Most if not all of them runs and disconnects their radios at the first sign of weather and most of them could NOT take formal traffic, even if their own life depended on it.

You really want to make a good discussion?

Ask the ARRL to revoke all amateur radio licenses more then 5 years old and require all amateurs to be retested every 10 years.
If you do not pass and if you do not conduct yourself as amateur radio operators should - you don't get a license!

If we could get rid of all the LIDS with the crappy radios and antenna's, that persists on tuning up right on top of someone's QSO or NET or DX...
If we could get rid of the IDIOTS on the 80 and 160 meters who sits there and cusses and acts like idiots.
If we could get rid of the wannabee's on the 2 meters that uses CW terminology instead of plain English, because they want people to think that if they know some Q codes that they are real hams.

Clean up our own door step before we clean up everyone else's.

Then go after all the illegal amplifier operators.

We could purge 250,000 licenses in about 5 years....

I'm sure that there are a bunch of people who has licenses that were not gotten by honest means - that if forced to retake the exam wouldn't - because they can't pass the exam - because they do not understand the questions on the test.

I say - GOOD BYE AND SO LONG AND GOOD RIDDANCE!

You know, I find it interesting, with all the grass roots level publication outlets in this country,--including the Liberty Net--that no one, barely even those locally, are talking about the undeclared Martial Law that's being imposed in Chicago. Nor is there substantive discussion about the mandatory evacuation of the so-called Red Zone being facilitated by armed federal troops. There is no discussion of the plans to close down major thoroughfares into and out of the city, including Lake Shore drive, and some highway routes. Nor the yet undisclosed 'enhanced security measures' which have been hinted to include full body scanners, on the commuter trains. Though, just this morning, it's been revealed that no bags beyond a certain size, which eliminates all work related briefcases and laptop bags, will be permitted on the trains. No food, no beverages...no morning coffee, and those danishes prone to premature detonation, either.

There are also 'papers of transit' required to get into and out of the so-called Red Zone.

Cars are being towed, TODAY, out of legal parking areas declared 'sensitive' by the Secret Service, which include nearly all the areas of the Loop, where people work, and live.

Locally, there has been very little open discussion of this. Though there has been comment on the radio that these exercises are de-sensitization exercises intended to get the locals used to the idea of increased use of force, and curtailed liberties, at will, by the city.

I'm surprised, especially, that the Liberty Net has not raised a clarion call about this.

I wasn't aware of any of this. Can you show me a couple of links to flesh out the story? I'll pass along your information to the net!

Yes, it is good.

I believe it was K3DK who mentioned the new bank wire system. If I'm not mistaken, he's reachable on Facebook if you want more details.

Here are some stories that made the local press. Diffuse, often contradictory, but in conflict with what's been seen on the streets. And eerily short on details. Local radio released some disturbing memoes this morning. But widespread coverage is not happening. What's being published is sparse, heavily downplayed, and without specificity. This is direct contradiction with personal experiences.

Today cars are already being towed. The tow zone is not clearly marked, and drivers don't know whether their cars are subject to tow, or not. City Hall is being evasive.

Yesterday, I saw gates being tested in Park Ridge that will close major roads into the City. These are recent installs. I've seen two more sets of these gates at other access points into the city.

I've been personally in the room, last week, when deputies, with military escorts, informed the manager of a studio where I was recording that he would be contacted by the Secret Service directly concerning the possible evacuation, and the full extent of the plan as it pertains to him. But to be shut down and out of the building by COB Thursday. Need to know.

Protests have been moved from the NATO summit region, to an area some miles away, in a residential area, of all places. Permits for protests are being revoked in record numbers without comment or appeal.

These are the things that aren't being talked about, while the press essentially fluffs the topic into virtual irrelevance, publicly.

How does something like this happen in the US, without the kind of outrage that sparked the riots in 1968? I mean...are we THAT ripe for uncontested martial law?

So, here are a few links. Real information is sparse, and does not reflect what's really happening to citizens who are affected by this. Nor is there substantive information about what's currently going on on the streets of Chicago. Or the extent that this plan may be implemented.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
07 - 13 May 2012

Solar activity ranged from low to moderate levels. Region 1476 (N10, L=180, class/area=Fkc/1050 on 09 May) was responsible for almost all x-ray flare activity during the week. It produced a total of 55 C-class flares, 6 M-class flares, and 69 optical flares. Region 1476 began the week as an Fkc type group with a beta-gamma magnetic configuration. By the 8th, it had grown in extent (17 degrees), spot count (35), and complexity (beta-gamma-delta) and produced an M1/1F flare at 1308 UTC. It reached its maximum areal coverage of 1050 millionths on the 9th when it produced an M4/1n at 1232 UTC, an M1/1b at 1408 UTC, and another M4 at 2105 UTC. The maximum extent and spot count (20 degrees, 50 spots) followed on the 10th when Region 1476 produced the largest of the flares, an M5/2b at 0418 UTC. The flare was accompanied by a three minute 10cm burst (690 sfu) at 10/0417 UTC and a Type IV emission at 10/0402 UTC, followed by a weak earth-directed Coronal Mass Ejection (CME). Later that day, Region 1476 produced an M1 at 2026 UTC, the last M-class event of the week. The region then began a slow but steady decline in areal coverage, longitudinal extent and spot count, although it sustained its beta-gamma-delta magnetic configuration.

Earlier in the week, the only M-class event not produced by Region 1476 was an M1/1n flare observed from Region 1471 (S21, L=276, class/area=Eho/320 on 02 May) at 07/1431 UTC. This flare was also accompanied by a 10cm burst (230 sfu) at 10/1415 UTC and a Type IV emission at 07/1409 UTC. STEREO-Ahead imagery suggested an earth-directed CME. The following day, two more potentially earth-directed, weak CMEs were observed in STEREO-A COR2 imagery.

Region 1477 (S24, L=140, class/area Dso/150 on 09 May) was split to form new Region 1478 (S24, L=135, class/area=Hsx/090 on 10 May) on 10 May. Similarly, Region 1479 (N15, L=105, class/area Dso/130 on 12 May) was split to form new Region 1482 (N14, L=100, class/area=Dso/080 on 13 May). Both of these divisions resulted from careful analysis of magnetogram data. After the split, Region 1477 became an Hsx type group with L=144, and Region 1479 became an Hxs type group near L=109.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels on the 10th through the 13th, and at moderate levels for the remainder.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to active conditions with minor to major storm periods observed at high latitudes. The week began with quiet conditions on 7th and the majority of the 8th. Around 08/0400 UTC, a solar sector boundary crossing from positive to negative was observed at the ACE spacecraft. By midday, the solar wind speed at ACE began to rise, marking the arrival of a coronal hole high speed stream (CH-HSS). Significant southward Bz began around 1730 UTC and reached a minimum of -13 nT late on the 8th before beginning a gradual return to neutral conditions late on the 10th. The geomagnetic field responded with active conditions from the last synoptic period on the 8th through the 9th. Minor to major storm levels were observed at high latitudes on the 9th. Activity subsided to mostly unsettled levels on the 10th, followed by mostly quiet conditions on the 11-12 May. The solar wind speed at ACE remained above 500 km/s until around 13/0000 UTC. Conditions were mostly unsettled on the 13th. Although there were a number of CMEs identified as potentially earth-directed, there was no definitive indication of CME arrival reflected in the ACE data suggesting the transient signatures were obliterated in the high speed stream.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
14 May - 09 June 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels throughout the period, with moderate activity most likely with the return of Old Region 1476 on 31 May.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal levels except on 14 May, 23-29 May, and 06-09 June. The high levels are expected in response to the presence of recurrent coronal hole high speed streams.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be quiet to unsettled with occasional active periods. The unsettled to active periods are associated with the geoeffective periods of recurrent CH-HSSs on 14 May, 21-23 May, and 05-08 June. Unsettled to occasionally active conditions are also expected on 14 May with the anticipated arrival of a CME from 12 May.

Actually it's added a new dimension. I don't have to talk to people anymore.

1829. Palmdale Case re: Ham Radio. The Truth

Mixed Decision from the California Court of Appeals in Palmdale, California Antenna Case
TAGS: court of appeals
02/08/2011

On January 27, 2011, the California Court of Appeals, Second Appellate District, issued its Opinion in the antenna case of Alec Zubarau, WB6X. In several respects, it is a win for Amateur Radio in California. Working with his ARRL Volunteer Counsel, Len Shaffer, WA6QHD, Mr Zubarau is now considering their next course of action.

The Court found that the Palmdale antenna ordinance, as it pertained to the height limit for vertical antennas, was ï¿½unenforceableï¿½ because it allowed a radio amateur to have a vertical antenna up to 75 feet high when measured from the ground but limited the ï¿½active element of the antenna arrayï¿½ to 30 feet. The ordinance did not define ï¿½arrayï¿½ or ï¿½active elementï¿½ and did not specify from where the 30 permitted feet for such ï¿½arrayï¿½ was to be measured. The Court found that if even one reasonable interpretation of the ordinance could be found, the ordinance could be upheld, but that in this case, no one could understand what the limitations were and how they could be applied. That portion of the Cityï¿½s ordinance was therefore unconstitutional and unenforceable.

The Court also held that the ordinance was unenforceable to the extent that it attempted to regulate radio frequency interference. The City maintained that it could regulate RFI, but the Court, citing case law and argument in ARRL Amicus Curiae brief, held that only the FCC could regulate RFI. Any State or municipal law that attempts to regulate RFI is preempted.

Of some concern to Len Shaffer, however, is that the Court held that Palmdale properly ordered Zubarau to remove his permitted 55-foot crankup tower. The Court opined that the small, VHF/UHF vertical on the roof constituted ï¿½reasonable accommodationï¿½ under PRB-1 and California PRB-1 statute (California Government Code Section 65850.3). The Court said that leaving Zubarau with a VHF/UHF antenna constituted a reasonable accommodation because it allowed him to be active in some part of Amateur Radio. There was no analysis of the ï¿½minimum practicable regulationï¿½ test in PRB-1 and the California statute, so that part of the three-prong PRB-1 test was left unexamined. Because the Court reversed the trial court on this finding, Zubarau had no longer clearly ï¿½substantially prevailedï¿½ in this case and so the Court remanded the case to the trial judge to re-examine the issue of attorneyï¿½s fees claimed by Zubarau.

The Courtï¿½s application of the ï¿½reasonable accommodationï¿½ standard of PRB-1 in this case is, in the view of Len Shaffer and ARRL, both unique and very narrow. Said ARRL General Counsel Chris Imlay, W3KD:

ï¿½While this decision is positive for Amateur Radio in California in two significant respects, the record in this case shows that the small, roof-mounted VHF/UHF antenna at WB6X was insufficient to conduct any international communications. Alecï¿½s tower is necessary in order to conduct international communications and to permit even a 50/50 chance of contacting Alecï¿½s native Belarus on any given day. The Court ignored this evidence and it did not apply the ï¿½reasonable accommodationï¿½ test articulated by FCC and in prior case law, and it did not apply PRB-1ï¿½s ï¿½least practicable restrictionï¿½ test at all. In essence, the Court applied a balancing test which FCC and several Federal courts have said is improper in conducting the PRB-1 analysis. It is not true that any accommodation for a radio amateur is reasonable accommodation, and it is not sufficient to simply permit a radio amateur ï¿½some participationï¿½ in our avocation. Instead, PRB-1 permits effective, reliable Amateur communications. It is hoped that the Court will revisit this portion of its otherwise favorable decision and get it right the second time.ï¿½

The court made three decisions that affect amateurs in California. First the court found that part of the Palmdale ordinance was unconstitutional because it was vague and could not be understood by a reasonable person. That part of the ordinance allowed an Amateur to have a vertical antenna up to 75 feet high when measured from the ground but limited the ï¿½active element of the antenna arrayï¿½ to 30 feet in height. The court found that the ordinance did not define ï¿½arrayï¿½ or ï¿½active elementï¿½ and did not say where the height of such array was measured from. After a number of questions were submitted regarding this ordinance, the court determined that no one could really understand what it meant and declared it unconstitutional. This part of the decision, said ARRL Volunteer Counsel Shaffer, will affect only hams living in Palmdale.

The next issue decided by the court had to do with radio frequency interference. They said that only the Federal government could regulate RFI and any state or municipal law that tried to address it was preempted. That means it is not enforceable. That part of the decision affects hams throughout the state, according to Shaffer. He asks any California amateur whose municipality or county has an ordinance that limits Amateur Radio antennas or operations based on whether there is interference to consumer or other devices to contact Southwestern Division Vice Director Marty Woll, N6VI, at n6vi@arrl.org.

The final part of the decision had to do with whether Palmdale followed the law when they made Alec Zubarau take down his permitted tower but allowed him to keep a VHF/UHF vertical on his roof. The court said they thought this was a reasonable accommodation because it allowed him to be active in some part of Amateur Radio. ï¿½This decision is troubling,ï¿½ said Shaffer, ï¿½and we are considering what options we may have regarding any further review of the issue. We will be conferring with various legal sources before any final determination is made.ï¿½

Hah. Doesn't matter to the FCC. Anyone running more than 4 watts on CB and interfering with other services will certainly get a knock on their door and get a stiff $10,000 fine to pay.

A friend of mine though, once did run a 1,000 watt CB radio, NO linear. LEGALLY!
How?
When the FCC inspector came knocking on the trailer he was using, it was explained that this was an emergency communications excercise and under the rules, the power was legal. The inspector left with out issuing a citation.

When he keyed down on the damn thing, it spread over 20 channels!
Nobody within 30 miles of him could talk.

It happened. I was at my house which was 15 miles away or more as the crow flies and I checked the channels. At least 10 channels on either side.
I don't recall all the detaila about the radio but I believe it used to be a military radio. And the FCC has no jurisdiction over military radios.
They might have some now but not when the radio was built.

Another time I talked to a NG guy who was using a military radio.
His radio could dial in the frequency precisely. He was transmitting on my frequency as his radio detected. When I told him what frequency to transmit on, his signal and audio was better.

I'll have to get in touch with my friend and see if he has the radio or recalls what make it was.

The FCC has jurisdiction over frequencies. Doesn't matter the equipment.

Actually, they also have jurisdiction over most of the equipment as well, including non-intentional radiators such as fluorescent lamps, dimmer switches, ad inf.

However, they do NOT have total jurisdiction over emissions on radio frequencies.. just on most of them. The NTIA regulates and polices use of government radio transmissions. They do coordinate with the FCC, though, to reduce interference (mostly to the government users) from band edges and harmonics/images.

I'm going to call bullshit on that. I'm not sure on the rules, but I don't think there's an exemption made for an emergency communications exercise.

There is no such exemption within part 97(?). The only thing even CLOSE to an exemption for power or even frequency would be the rule that allows that any frequency and any power may be used in a LIFE THREATENING EMERGENCY.
This rule, however, is not blanket, and is basically only a defense against a rule violation.

>When he keyed down on the damn thing, it spread over 20 channels!
>Nobody within 30 miles of him could talk.

Bullshit again.

That does sound like a bit of an exaggeration, however the basic setup is not unheard of. Back in the 1970's, there was a CB operator using ham equipment (back in the early 50's, 11m was a ham band), kicking 1KW of power into a beam antenna (a total of about 2.5KW EIRP). In the local area, you couldn't use a CB when he was keyed up. In the direction that beam was pointed, it could easily swamp all 23 channels for up to 25-30 miles.

I believe you are speaking of "Candy Girl"?
I had heard she had one hell of a setup that included one of the tightest and most expensive set of quad beams around. She had been busted like 3 or 4 times and that didn't phase her one bit.

One time I was leaving a "ham fest" in Cincinnati and she was on the air.
Just for kicks, I shouted at her and she actually replied.

I was running 4 watts legal. So her beams must have been pointted in my direction.

As for the legal side of that event, that law is correct. That is the law my friend pointed out to the inspector.

I was actually partially the reason why the FCC changed their rules.
A Radio Shack near where I lived was a hang out for a few friends of mine who were heavy into CB and radios. So we put up an antenna that was sixty feet higher than the roof of the building. Which was the law then. We had it set up with two antennas. the tall one and the short one. We asked people to watch their signal strength and when we switched to the tall one, the signal jumped royally.
Two weeks later, an FCC inspector sat out in front of the store while we were on the air.I stood there looking right at him while keyed down. After an hour of looking through his books, he left. He was pissed because we were legal!
They changed the law to limit the antenna height to 60 feet above ground. Period.

Evan is the "know it all" guy. He thinks that because he is a ham, radio wise that is, he knows all about radios and the legal stuff behind them.

As for electrical devices which are not "radios", the only thing the FCC can do about them is enforce the manufacturers to slap a label on the stuff stating the equipment must accpet any interference and not cause any interference.

Your standard 40 channel CB radio can't. It is controlled by circuitry that must transmit on precise frequencies.

Obviously, you've never seen a radio that can dial in a khz at a time.
I've seen some that get even tighter than that.
He told me he had a display that showed him my frequency as he saw it.
It was like 2khz off the actual frequency.

The last time a friend needed Part 15 certification he had to send a production prototype to a specialized facility in Utah, terrain shielded and in an anechoic chamber.

My old Collins Radios could be dialed-in with about =/- 300 Hz (0.3 KHz) MY ICOM R-75 is accurate to one Hertz(0.001 KHz).

An interesting transmission that apparently started on 6990u within the past few days, and now on 6950u (at 0730), continuously repeats the following:

"She had your dark suit in greasy wash water all year. Don't ask me to carry an oily rag like that. They used an aggressive policeman to flag thoughtless motorists"

Reminds me of the Yosemite Sam fun we had years ago.

Doesn't the sticker state something to the effect of, "In compliance with FCC regulation [insert number here], this device may not cause interference and must accept all interference."? I could look up the exact quote, but my paraphrase should get the idea across.

Anyone can tell anyone else to turn something off so long as they have the power of speech. Without the authority to compel the other person to comply, it's may be pointless to do so.

I don't remember a Cagney movie like that, but the quote of "John has a long mustache" was used in both the movies "The Longest Day" (D-Day) and "Red Dawn". In The Longest Day it was sent in French to the French resistance.

One of the polygamist Mormon perverts who travels between the US and British Columbia has fathered over 120 children. The wives seem to be collecting welfare (as single moms) and handing the money over to hubby. The politicians are obviously impressed by this scam, as they are refusing to investigate.

Many of these politicians are thinking of converting to this fundamentalist Mormonism, as they would get seventy two virgins right here on earth. No martyrdom required.

On the brighter side, these Harems are comprised of all FEMALE consorts, unlike in Holland, MI. where a typical Harem is predominantly MALE and owned by alleged soft tissue injury claim recipients with delusions of military prowess.

Yes, they are still doing that. The US military is also one of the world's largest environmental polluters. The laws simply don't apply to them. Even the infamous Tar Sands in Alberta, Canada can't compete and THAT is a world class polluter.

I'm still pissed off at the eighty thousand barrels of nuclear waste dumped by the Military bastards off the coast of California. Perhaps they are counting on the entertainment industry to keep the lemmings forgetful.

On a radio topic (They broadcast from there), check out the ethnic cleansing of Diego Garcia. They even had all their dogs killed off as an incentive to move.

amateur radio operators are the enforcers of what constitutes proper

Liberty Net: May 12, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THERE IS quite a range of opinion ï¿½ and debate ï¿½ on the weekly Liberty Net, and in many ways it can be regarded as a confluence, even a synthesis, of the best ideas from all sides of the political spectrum. To me the most interesting trend is the increasing recognition that the regime in Washington is an outlaw, illegal regime and is not the legitimate successor to the government set up by the Founders.

Here are some of the ideas brought to light during this weekï¿½s Liberty Net:

ï¿½ Why are 26 states contracting with a Soros-owned company in Spain to tally the votes in their elections ï¿½ especially with Sorosï¿½ reputation for interfering with elections around the world? (9 minutes)

ï¿½ When you hear a politician blathering about how we must ï¿½soak the rich,ï¿½ you can be sure that the politician is working for the super rich ï¿½ who definitely donï¿½t like competition, and use the politics of envy to cripple any mid-level wealthy families from rising to their level. (19 minutes)

ï¿½ One way you can tell which pastors and preachers are expressing genuine, heartfelt belief ï¿½ and which are phonies ï¿½ is simply to investigate the size of their houses. Those living in opulent homes have a lot to lose and probably guide their tongues accordingly. (27 minutes)

ï¿½ Watch for false flag attacks supposedly from anti-System activists Left and/or Right. The real actors will be intelligence agencies or their patsies, and the real goals will be to 1) justify more draconian police state laws, and 2) make the people hate and distrust the truth-tellers who are trying to save them. (39 minutes)

ï¿½ Some of the most bizarre aspects of Establishment liberalism are 1) its support of the Islamic incursions into the West, despite Islamï¿½s radically illiberal ideology, and 2) its alliance with the super rich and their banks and media, despite their pose of supporting ï¿½the workers.ï¿½ Establishment conservatism is equally bizarre, with its slavish worship of Israel and its attempt to remake the world through bombing and drone murders. Perhaps both wings of the Washington regime are equally phony ï¿½ and equally toxic. (48 minutes)

ï¿½ What does it signify when almost no judges are impeached ï¿½ when there is practically no movement to do so ï¿½ when so many blatantly unconstitutional, illegal, and immoral decisions are rendered by our crooked courts? (56 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s time for a mass movement to nationalize and replace the entire corrupt commercial banking system, and get rid of fractional reserve banking once and for all. (58 minutes)

ï¿½ What Russia and Iceland have done ï¿½ and what Ireland is talking about doing ï¿½ should be an inspiration to us all: They put crooked bankers and propaganda-spewing media moguls in prison, and ripped their paws from the levers of power. (1 hour 1 minute)

Remember that you can find ï¿½ and check in to ï¿½ the Liberty Net on a clear frequency around 3950-4000 kHz LSB every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or you can listen live on the Internet at the ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net, and thanks to all of you for checking in and making the net what it is today!

One hopes one's neighbors are civilized and follow the law. It says right on the sticker if someone reports interference you must cease operating the device. Willfully interfering with licensed communications is a Federal Felony, punishable by jail time and and a $10,000 fine for EACH DAY the interference occurs.

How's that for "Authority to Compel" mister smarty pants?

After lying about it for decades the "heroes" have finally been forced to admit they've been lying. And the scumbags are still lying about the scope of their criminal activity. And per usual there will be absolutely no consequences for the "heroes". Pathetic.

You are mistaken.

purchase I made. An Android Netbook.
Note what the sticker actually has written on it.

The following is included to show when the Netbook passed the QC inspection. March of 2012. Presumably it's in compliance with current laws and regulations regarding what must be included on the sticker.

There is nothing about anyone having to cease operation due to

There's the difference. Willful interference is a crime. If

How long have the flunkies in the media been peddling the lie that the American working men and woman are only handing out $3,000,000,000 annually to the fascist Jewish state - America's "best ally"? It is ALWAYS stated that US assistance is "$3 billion". Why do they cling to that specific number? It hasn't changed for 25 years regardless of the fact the figure is astronomically higher. Just wondering.

"The Obama administration has granted an Israeli request for an additional $70 million to fund a so-called missile defense program known as "Iron Dome." On Thursday, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said the Pentagon will request the funding over the next three years. The money would come on top of the more than $200 million already allocated for the system and the additional $3 billion in annual U.S. military aid. Republicans say the U.S. funding for Iron Dome does not go far enough, and are advancing a measure that would give Israel an additional $680 million. Speaking at a meeting with Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in Washington, Israeli Defense Minister Ehud Barak thanked the White House for its support."
http://www.democracynow.org/2012/5/18/headlines#5183

Israeli Gunfire Wounds 7 Palestinians Near Gaza Border

"Israel has launched new attacks on the occupied Gaza Strip. On Thursday, seven Palestinians were wounded after Israeli forces opened fire near the Israel-Gaza border. At least three of the victims were said to be farmers. Another Palestinian farmer said he fled the shooting."

Nafez Jindiyah: "We are farmers, we were planting and we left our tools behind us. We also left our donkeys and cars to the east from here. Suddenly the Israelis started to shoot on us so we ran away."

"A Victory for All of Us"

By Chris Hedges

In January, attorneys Carl Mayer and Bruce Afran asked me to be the lead plaintiff in a lawsuit against President Barack Obama and Defense Secretary Leon Panetta that challenged the harsh provisions of the National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA). We filed the lawsuit, worked for hours on the affidavits, carried out the tedious depositions, prepared the case and went to trial because we did not want to be passive in the face of another egregious assault on basic civil liberties, because resistance is a moral imperative, and because, at the very least, we hoped we could draw attention to the injustice of the law. None of us thought we would win. But every once in a while the gods smile on the damned.

U.S. District Judge Katherine Forrest, in a 68-page opinion, ruled Wednesday that Section 1021 of the NDAA was unconstitutional. It was a stunning and monumental victory. With her ruling she returned us to a country where—as it was before Obama signed this act into law Dec. 31—the government cannot strip a U.S. citizen of due process or use the military to arrest him or her and then hold him or her in military prison indefinitely. She categorically rejected the government's claims that the plaintiffs did not have the standing to bring the case to trial because none of us had been indefinitely detained, that lack of imminent enforcement against us meant there was no need for an injunction and that the NDAA simply codified what had previously been set down in the 2001 Authorization to Use Military Force Act. The ruling was a huge victory for the protection of free speech. Judge Forrest struck down language in the law that she said gave the government the ability to incarcerate people based on what they said or wrote. Maybe the ruling won't last. Maybe it will be overturned. But we and other Americans are freer today than we were a week ago. And there is something in this.

The government lawyers, despite being asked five times by the judge to guarantee that we plaintiffs would not be charged under the law for our activities, refused to give any assurances. They did not provide assurances because under the law there were none. We could, even they tacitly admitted, be subject to these coercive measures. We too could be swept away into a black hole. And this, I think, decided the case.

“At the hearing on this motion, the government was unwilling or unable to state that these plaintiffs would not be subject to indefinite detention under [Section] 1021,” Judge Forrest noted. “Plaintiffs are therefore at risk of detention, of losing their liberty, potentially for many years.”

The government has 60 days to appeal. It can also, as Mayer and Afran have urged, accept the injunction that nullifies the law. If the government appeals, the case will go to a federal appellate court. The ruling, even if an appellate court upholds it, could be vanquished in the Supreme Court, especially given the composition of that court.

We had none of the resources of the government. Mayer and Afran worked for weeks on the case without compensation. All of us paid for our own expenses. And few people, including constitutional lawyers of Glenn Greenwald’s caliber, thought we had a chance. But we pushed forward. We pushed forward because all effort to impede the corporate state, however quixotic, is essential. Even if we ultimately fail we will be able to say we tried.

This law was, after all, not about foreign terrorism. It was about domestic dissent. If the state could link Occupy and other legitimate protest movements with terrorist groups (US Day of Rage suffered such an attempt), then the provisions in the NDAA could, in a period of instability, be used to “disappear” U.S. citizens into military gulags, including the government’s offshore penal colonies. And once there, stripped of due process, detainees could be held until, in the language of the law, “the end of hostilities.” In an age of permanent war that would be a lifetime.

Human existence, as I witnessed in war, is precarious and often very short. The battles that must be fought may never be won in our lifetime. And there will always be new battles to define our struggle. Resistance to tyranny and evil is never ending. It is a way, rather, of defining our brief sojourn on the planet. Revolt, as Albert Camus reminded us, is the only acceptable definition of the moral life. Revolt, he wrote, is “a constant confrontation between man and his obscurity. … It is not aspiration, for it is devoid of hope. That revolt is the certainty of a crushing fate, without the resignation that ought to accompany it.”

“A living man can be enslaved and reduced to the historic condition of an object,” Camus warned. “But if he dies in refusing to be enslaved, he reaffirms the existence of another kind of human nature which refuses to be classified as an object.”

The lawyers and I and the other plaintiffs mounted this challenge because what had been solidified into the legal code was a palpable wrong. Victory or defeat was not part of the equation. Not to challenge this law would have meant being complicit in its implementation. And once resistance defines a life it becomes reflexive.

“You do not become a ‘dissident’ just because you decide one day to take up this most unusual career,” Vaclav Havel said when he was battling the communist regime in Czechoslovakia. “You are thrown into it by your personal sense of responsibility, combined with a complex set of external circumstances. You are cast out of the existing structures and placed in a position of conflict with them. It begins as an attempt to do your work well, and ends with being branded an enemy of society. ... The dissident does not operate in the realm of genuine power at all. He is not seeking power. He has no desire for office and does not gather votes. He does not attempt to charm the public. He offers nothing and promises nothing. He can offer, if anything, only his own skin—and he offers it solely because he has no other way of affirming the truth he stands for. His actions simply articulate his dignity as a citizen, regardless of the cost.”

Rebellion is an act that assures us of remaining free and independent human beings. Rebellion is not waged because it will work; indeed in its noblest form it is waged when we know it will fail. Our existence, as Camus wrote, must itself be “an act of rebellion.” Not to rebel, not to protect and nurture life even in the face of death, is spiritual and moral suicide. The Nazi concentration camp guards sought to break prisoners first and then kill them. They understood that even the power to choose the timing and circumstances of one’s death was an affirmation of personal freedom and dangerous to the status quo. So although the guards killed at random they went to great lengths to prevent people in the camps from committing suicide. Totalitarian systems, to perpetuate themselves, always seek to break autonomy and self-determination. This makes all acts of resistance a threat, even those acts that will not succeed. And this is why in all states that rule by force any act of rebellion, even one that is insignificant, must be ruthlessly crushed. The goal of the corporate state, like that of any totalitarian entity, is to create a society where no one has the capacity to resist.

It is not going to get better. The climate crisis alone will assure that. The corporate state knows what is coming. Globalization is breaking down. Our natural resources are being depleted. Economic and political upheavals are inevitable. And our corporate rulers are preparing a world of masters and serfs, a world where repression will be our daily diet, a world of hunger and riots, a world of brutal control and a world where our spirits must be broken. We have to stop asking what is reasonable or practical, what the Democratic Party or the government can do for us, what will work or not work. We must refuse now to make any concessions, large or small. We must remember that the lesser of two evils is still evil. We must no longer let illusions pacify us. Hell is truth seen too late. In large and small ways we are called to resist, resist, resist, as we race heedlessly into the abyss.

Who is Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ?

Mark C. Morgan of 17366 North River Road, Tapiola, Michigan describes himself as a "kinky bisexual, into bondage, domination, and sado-masochism." As indicated in the CCRAA club newsletter, Morgan was impeached by members of the CCRAA radio club, in the summer of 2008. His impeachment was partly a result of the fact that he falsely accused seven men of child pandering and partly due to the fact that his actions brought disrepute onto the club.

Mark Morgan is under investigation for identity theft related to the unauthorized use of another man's name and email address. Information related to the incident was posted on the website on February 13 at 1:15 AM. Morgan has continuously posted false and defamatory information about various individuals for a number of years.

On February 13, it was also reported that nine (9) accounts used by Morgan to flood multiple newsgroups with annoyance messages had been removed for terms of service (TOS) violations.

Amazingly, after falsely reporting an individual for child sex pandering last year, Mark Morgan has now stolen the email address of the same FCC licensee, and, as of 10 AM eastern time on 2/13/09, Morgan had already posted 308 fraudulent messages. Here is a link to the fraudulent profile created by Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ. The FBI and Law enforcement agencies in Michigan have been notified about this latest act of fraud perpetrated by Mark Morgan.

During the period prior to Morgan being impeached by the CCRAA radio club, the turbulence resulting from Morgan's fraud, malicious acts, and false accusations were acknowledged by club members to have cast a bad light on the organization. According to the club leadership: When Morgan began posting statements about the club on his private blog, leading to the possibility of the club being involved in a nasty civil suit, club members realized their mistake in electing him. After a short tenure as a club officer, Morgan was impeached by a margin of 11:1. Morgan's own vote was the only vote in his favor.

Like his friend Karol Madera, Morgan has a long history of involvement with the police, and the mental health industry. Law enforcement officials in Michigan have stated that Morgan was transported for psychiatric examination in 2004, to a hospital in Marquette, Michigan, under supervision of Sheriff's Deputies.

Morgan calls himself an ally of Karol Madera, VE7KFM.

In collusion with Madera, Morgan made malicious and false reports of child pandering to child protective service agencies, against 7 different men, in 7 different states.

Morgan was banned from qrz.com and hamisland.com for posting defamation about various individuals. Morgan has admitted he uses Google services (blogspot) to manage at least 3 defamatory blogs, using material fabricated by Karol Madera.

Morgan creates multiple identities, enabling him to flood the usenet service with thousands of nonsensical messages, in retaliation against those who have revealed his many lies and fabrications over the past 10 years. At last count, Morgan had posted well over 200,000 meaningless posts, using just a few of these multiple identities. Morgan admits he has rendered the service useless, citing "self defense." The removal of one of the many identities used by KB9RQZ on usenet is a victory in the effort to reduce the incessant flood of posts made by Morgan in an effort to deny others the ability to enjoy the usenet service.

Quotable Quotes ~ by Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ

On reporting 7 men for child sex crimes:

"likewise you can prove I made a charge , you can't prove it was flase and malicious you would have to prove that I did not suspect you, indeed if I am mental ill as you suggest in post 2 then your task becomes even harder, since if I am nuts who knows what I believe"

"if you try and stop me either nothing will happen , or I will never even notice the effort or if you manage to inconvence my exercise of my rights I will look into what price I can extract from you."

"you also provoked mater by insisting your had the right to control who responded to your posts in RRAP"

"I made no flase report to CPS (child protective services) indeed you don't what a fasle report is it seems since I did and do and in fact I am more convinced than ever that you are likely the offer of the note claimignt o be willing to rent me the sexual service of that 9 yo but in any event I started nothing with you YOU started thing remeber you insisted I hated Ham radio because I said its response to Katrina could be imporved"

"when you atack me you invite response the only question is wether you have the gut to allow the reponse"

KB9RQZ, on shooting a teenaged boy (according to Houghton County Sheriff's Department, it never happened)

"at about 6:35 this morning I was awakened not by the expected return of my wife form the renfaire but the sound of motors. the motors belong to an ATV that had managed to get a rope onto my tower (30 foot wooden structure and was puling the tower down. O got sever round with the shotgun did not score a good hit but but the cops found blood on the treea dn the trails lead back to n rover river road after a bit where it stop and free tire marks (looks like one of the pickups that carry atv's around here).

the rope parted and no real damage to the anttenas was done although my masting needs work to make it stable again. have had loads of fun with the cops over the matter. I wonder what poor kid (I could see he was not more than say 16 ish) the nutjobs conned into making the attack and with what lie. sad realy."

February 2009 ~ Yet Another KB9RQZ Identity Banned from Google Groups

Another of the email adresses (kb9rqz@yahoo.com) used by Mark Morgan of Chassell, MI to flood usenet with thousands of nonsensical, useless messages, has been banned by Google groups for numerous violations of Google's terms of use, which include efforts to defame, abuse, harass, stalk, threaten or otherwise violate the legal rights (such as rights of privacy and publicity) of others; posting inappropriate, defamatory, infringing, obscene, or unlawful Content, and; restricting and inhibiting other users from using and enjoying the Service, through repeated flooding, spamming, and changing of thread titles.

The following is a repost about Morgan, made on Daniel Jeswald's blog, attributed to Steven Robeson:

Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, is a very disturbed, admittedly deviant, and dishonest person who has been harrassing Amateur Radio operators and disrupting radio, and other forums, since at least 1997.

As part of his on-going fusillade, he has, at various times, insisted that he's a "colonel" in the US Army "chemical corps," further insisting that he's been "drafted," and further insisting that he was not allowed to "resign."

Never mind that he was only 8 years old when the draft was stopped in the 70's! He's since recanted the "Colonel" claim, saying he was only a Lieutenant, then claiming he was only a Sergeant at discharge -- under another name that the CIA knows about -- and approved.

Oh, and he was kicked out of the service due to his "nerves" according to Mr. Morgan. However, the HCSD and MSP both have him on record as being transported to Marquette General Hospital in 2004, due to "involuntary commitment for psychiatric evaluation."

Mr. Morgan has perpetuated a smear campaign against other members of various forums, going as far as post-editing comments, forging posts, and even trying to make "complaints" to the Civil Air Patrol Inspector General Corps and the FCC, etc., about perceived slights that have nothing to do with CAP or anything with any bearing on reality.

Recently, Morgan reported 7 different men to Child Protective Services in 7 different states. All this, because he has allied himself with yet another lunatic in Canada, known as Karol Madera, VE7KFM, who is as bad, or worse, than Mark Morgan.

This behavior is nothing more than an attempt by Morgan to "silence" those who would expose his foolishness and who refuse to tolerate his dishonesty in public forums.

Mr. Morgan has admitted to various acts of perversion and deceit, going as far as bragging about his use of lying, and his belief that deceit should be proactively taught to children as part of their upbringing. He describes himself as a kinky, bisexual, rabbi, who is into bondage, domination, and sado-masochism. He's been banned from almost every polite radio forum on the internet, but he still spams usenet groups, nearly every day, with nonsensical messages and libel.

Mr. Morgan has even gone as far as to create multiple screen names with which to spam usenet and other forums, including one screen name that invokes the name of my deceased daughter in order to perpetuate his demented "point of view".

Be aware. Be informed. Mark C. Morgan is NOT a person of reputable character, nor does he have an honest nature. In fact, not only was he transported to Marquette General Hospital for psychiatric evaluation and treatment in 2004, but he has a long history of similar treatment and harassment of others by various devious and underhanded means.

Mark Morgan has been investigated for the abuse of his elderly father, and for making false sos calls, as recently as December, 2008. There have even been rumors that Mark Morgan stole money from his elderly father, in order to move to Michigan, to avoid prosecution there, for crimes that have not been published, yet.

This summer (2008) Mr. Morgan was voted out of the CCRAA amateur radio club by a vote of 11:1. He was ejected from that club and banned from the websites qrz.com and ham island.net. Reports of dishonesty, slander, libel, and theft, follow Mark Morgan around the internet, like the stench from the local dump.

Here is a link to one of the screen names used to flood forums with unwanted posts and garbage of the type I previously mentioned. And here is another from IP addresses at Hughes satellite services, the latest IP addresses being 69.19.14.28 and 69.19.113.131

In summary, beware of Mark C. Morgan of 17366 North River Road, Tapiola, Michigan. Do not hesitate to contact Houghton County Sheriff's Department if he begins stalking you, or your family. Unfortunately, I have first hand experience with his stalking and harassment.

Mark Christopher Morgan can be reached for comment at kb9rqz@hughes.net or by phone at 906-523-4520 or via his postal address at Mark C. Morgan 17366 North River Road, Tapiola, Michigan 49931

As President Jimmy Carter blocked aid to Israel due to their human rights violations. It was astonishing how quickly Israeli crimes against humanity ceased. Unsurprisingly his emphasis on nations respecting human rights played a significant role in his being a one term President. Can't have THAT now CAN we!
As for the debt, at this point it is simply monopoly money, it's all a charade premised upon a lies and illusions something that has no intrinsic value. Backed only be the "full faith of the government" lol...the game is over but nobody will acknowledge it.

The "preferred alternative" of these sleazebags is that people who care SHUT THE F UP!!! After all, they are making the world safer and besides all that, the "Holy" Bible gives them permission! You know the "God gave man dominion over the animals" thingy as America's idol

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
14 - 20 May 2012

Solar activity ranged from very low to moderate levels. Region 1476 (N09, L=180, class/area Fkc/1050 on 09 May) continued to be the major contributor of x-ray flare activity throughout the week. It produced 13 C-class flares and an M-flare. Region 1476 began the week as an Fko type group with a beta-gamma configuration. As it rotated off the west limb on 17 May, the region produced an M5/1f flare at 17/0147 UTC. This event was accompanied by a 22 minute 10cm Radio Burst (600 sfu) at 17/0142 UTC, Type II (645 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps, and a partial halo CME. The CME was first observed by the SOHO/LASCO C3 spacecraft beginning at 17/0206 UTC with an estimated plane-of-sky speed of approximately 1200 km/s. The majority of the ejecta was directed off the west limb. Region 1476 continued to produce C-class flares as it rotated off the visible disk on 18 May. A filament eruption produced a CME that was observed in STEREO A COR 2 imagery (plane-of-sky speed approximately 482 km/s) beginning at 18/0709 UTC on 18 May. The ejecta was slightly north of the ecliptic plane, however a glancing blow is possible from that event.

A greater than 10 MeV and greater than 100 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit was observed associated with the 17 May M5 flare. The greater than 10 MeV proton event began at 17/0210 UTC and reached a peak flux of 255 pfu at 17/0430 UTC, ended at 18/1620UTC.
The greater than 10 MeV proton event crossed the 100 pfu threshold (S2) at 17/0245 UTC and fell below 100 pfu at 17/0945 UTC. The greater than 100 MeV proton event began at 17/0200 UTC and reached a maximum of 20 pfu at 17/0230 UTC, ended at 17/1725 UTC.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate to high levels from 14 through 16 May. Moderate levels were observed from 17 through 20 May.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to active levels. Quiet levels were observed on 15, 17, and 19 May. Quiet to unsettled levels were observed on 14 and 18 May. Quiet to unsettled levels with isolated active periods were observed on 16 and 20 May. On 16 May, an extended period of the southward Bz component of the interplanetary magnetic field caused an isolated active level during the 16/2100 - 2400 UTC period. At approximately 20/0136 UTC, the ACE satellite ovserved an interplanetary shock passage with a corresponding weak sudden impulse observed in the Boulder magnetometer (15 nT) at 20/0215 UTC. The shock passage was likely associated with the 17 May CME. The geomagnetic field responded with an isolated active period during the 20/0300 - 0600 UTC period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
21 May - 16 June 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels with a slight chance for M-class flares through 31 May and again from 14 June through the end of the forecast period. Low to moderate levels are expected from 31 May through 13 June due to the return of old Region 1476.

A chance for a greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit exists from 31 May through 13 June due to the return of old Region 1476.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal levels on 21 - 23 May, 30 May - 05 June, and again on 13 - 16 June. High levels are expected on 24 - 29 May and again on 06 - 12 June. High levels are in response to recurrent coronal hole high speed wind streams.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be quiet to active on 22 - 23 May as the arrival of the 18 May CME as well as a coronal hole high speed stream become geoeffective. Quiet to active conditions are also expected on 06 - 09 June as another recurrent coronal hole high speed stream moves into geoeffective position. Mostly quiet to unsettled conditons are expected for the remainder of the forecast period.

I'm trying to resurrect one of these radios that has been left in a bad state by a previous owner who had started a restoration and left off with a LOT of missing parts and parts dangling from one wire. I have the schematic and manual, but some good shots of the underside would help a great deal.

12> Source:

12> Who is Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ?

12> Mark C. Morgan of 17366 North River Road, Tapiola, Michigan describes 12> himself as a "kinky bisexual, into bondage, domination, and sado-12> masochism." As indicated in the CCRAA club newsletter, Morgan was 12> impeached by members of the CCRAA radio club, in the summer of 2008.
12> His impeachment was partly a result of the fact that he falsely 12> accused seven men of child pandering and partly due to the fact that 12> his actions brought disrepute onto the club.

12> Mark Morgan is under investigation for identity theft related to the 12> unauthorized use of another man's name and email address.
Information
12> related to the incident was posted on the website on February 13 at 12> 1:15 AM. Morgan has continuously posted false and defamatory 12> information about various individuals for a number of years.

12> On February 13, it was also reported that nine (9) accounts used by 12> Morgan to flood multiple newsgroups with annoyance messages had been 12> removed for terms of service (TOS) violations.

12> Amazingly, after falsely reporting an individual for child sex
12> pandering last year, Mark Morgan has now stolen the email address of
12> the same FCC licensee, and, as of 10 AM eastern time on 2/13/09,

12> Morgan had already posted 308 fraudulent messages. Here is a link to 12> the fraudulent profile created by Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ. The FBI and Law
12> enforcement agencies in Michigan have been notified about this latest 12> act of fraud perpetrated by Mark Morgan.

12> During the period prior to Morgan being impeached by the CCRAA radio
12> club, the turbulence resulting from Morgan's fraud, malicious acts, 12> and false accusations were acknowledged by club members to have cast a 12> bad light on the organization. According to the club leadership:
When 12> Morgan began posting statements about the club on his private blog, 12> leading to the possibility of the club being involved in a nasty civil 12> suit, club members realized their mistake in electing him. After a 12> short tenure as a club officer, Morgan was impeached by a margin
of
12> 11:1. Morgan's own vote was the only vote in his favor.

12> Like his friend Karol Madera, Morgan has a long history of 12> involvement with the police, and the mental health industry. Law 12> enforcement officials in Michigan have stated that Morgan was 12> transported for psychiatric examination in 2004, to a hospital in 12> Marquette, Michigan, under supervision of Sheriff's Deputies.

12> Morgan calls himself an ally of Karol Madera, VE7KFM.

12> In collusion with Madera, Morgan made malicious and false reports
of
12> child pandering to child protective service agencies, against 7 12> different men, in 7 different states.

12> Morgan was banned from qrz.com and hamisland.com for posting
12> defamation about various individuals. Morgan has admitted he uses 12> Google services (blogspot) to manage at least 3 defamatory blogs, 12> using material fabricated by Karol Madera.

12> Morgan creates multiple identities, enabling him to flood the usenet
12> service with thousands of nonsensical messages, in retaliation against 12> those who have revealed his many lies and fabrications over the past 12> 10 years. At last count, Morgan had posted well over 200,000 12> meaningless posts, using just a few of these multiple identities.
12> Morgan admits he has rendered the service useless, citing "self 12> defense." The removal of one of the many identities used by KB9RQZ on 12> usenet is a victory in the effort to reduce the incessant flood of 12> posts made by Morgan in an effort to deny others the ability to enjoy 12> the usenet service.

12> The following is a repost about Morgan, made on Daniel Jeswald's 12> blog, attributed to Steven Robeson:

12> Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, is a very disturbed, admittedly deviant, and 12> dishonest person who has been harrassing Amateur Radio operators and 12> disrupting radio, and other forums, since at least 1997.

12> As part of his on-going fusillade, he has, at various times, insisted 12> that he's a "colonel" in the US Army "chemical corps," further 12> insisting that he's been "drafted," and further insisting that he was 12> not allowed to "resign."

12> Never mind that he was only 8 years old when the draft was stopped in 12> the 70's! He's since recanted the "Colonel" claim, saying he was only 12> a Lieutenant, then claiming he was only a Sergeant at discharge -- 12> under another name that the CIA knows about -- and approved.

12> Oh, and he was kicked out of the service due to his "nerves" 12> according to Mr. Morgan. However, the HCSD and MSP both have him
on 12> record as being transported to Marquette General Hospital in 2004, due
12> to "involuntary commitment for psychiatric evaluation."

12> Mr. Morgan has perpetuated a smear campaign against other members of 12> various forums, going as far as post-editing comments, forging posts,
12> and even trying to make "complaints" to the Civil Air Patrol Inspector
12> General Corps and the FCC, etc., about perceived slights that have 12> nothing to do with CAP or anything with any bearing on reality.

12> Recently, Morgan reported 7 different men to Child Protective 12> Services in 7 different states. All this, because he has allied 12> himself with yet another lunatic in Canada, known as Karol Madera, 12> VE7KFM, who is as bad, or worse, than Mark Morgan.

12> This behavior is nothing more than an attempt by Morgan to "silence"
12> those who would expose his foolishness and who refuse to tolerate his 12> dishonesty in public forums.

12> Mr. Morgan has admitted to various acts of perversion and deceit, 12> going as far as bragging about his use of lying, and his belief that 12> deceit should be proactively taught to children as part of their 12> upbringing. He describes himself as a kinky, bisexual, rabbi, who is 12> into bondage, domination, and sado-masochism. He's been banned from 12> almost every polite radio forum on the internet, but he still spams
12> usenet groups, nearly every day, with nonsensical messages and libel.

12> Mr. Morgan has even gone as far as to create multiple screen names 12> with which to spam usenet and other forums, including one screen name 12> that invokes the name of my deceased daughter in order to perpetuate 12> his demented "point of view".

12> Be aware. Be informed. Mark C. Morgan is NOT a person of reputable 12> character, nor does he have an honest nature. In fact, not only was he 12> transported to Marquette General Hospital for psychiatric evaluation 12> and treatment in 2004, but he has a long history of similar treatment
12> and harassment of others by various devious and underhanded means.

12> Mark Morgan has been investigated for the abuse of his elderly
12> father, and for making false sos calls, as recently as December, 2008.
12> There have even been rumors that Mark Morgan stole money from his 12> elderly father, in order to move to Michigan, to avoid prosecution 12> there, for crimes that have not been published, yet.

12> This summer (2008) Mr. Morgan was voted out of the CCRAA amateur 12> radio club by a vote of 11:1. He was ejected from that club and banned
12> from the websites qrz.com and ham island.net. Reports of dishonesty,
12> slander, libel, and theft, follow Mark Morgan around the internet, 12> like the stench from the local dump.

12> Here is a link to one of the screen names used to flood forums

12> unwanted posts and garbage of the type I previously mentioned. And 12> here is another from IP addresses at Hughes satellite services,
the
12> latest IP addresses being 69.19.14.28 and 69.19.113.131

12> In summary, beware of Mark C. Morgan of 17366 North River Road, 12> Tapiola, Michigan. Do not hesitate to contact Houghton County

Oick, sure and begorrah, ever since I was a kid I have owned other dogs before. One of them was a Cocker Spaniel that I named Tom Dooley, that old Tom Dooley song.Way back in December 1969 I worked night shift at a Burger King to earn some extra Christmas money. One night I brought one of those burgers home for Tom Dooley. That dog didn't touch that Burger King burger. That proves dogs are smarter than people.

hi,

THE CHALLENGE OF THE QUR’AAN

Literature and poetry have been instruments of human expression andcreativity, in all cultures. The world also witnessed an age when literature andpoetry occupied pride of position, similar to that now enjoyed by science and technology.
Muslims as well as non-Muslims agree that Al-Qur’aan is Arabic literature par excellence - that it is the best Arabic literature on the face of the earth.
The Qur’aan, challenges mankind in the following verses:
“And if ye are in doubt As to what We have revealed From time to timeto Our Servant, then produce a Soorah Like thereunto; And call yourwitnesses or helpers (If there are any) besides Allah, If your (doubts) are true. But if ye cannot –And of a surety you cannot. hen fear the Fire Whose fuel is Men and Stones – Which is prepared for those Who reject Faith.” [Al-Qur’aan 2:23-24] 1
The same notation is followed throughout the book. References and translation of the Qur’aan are from the translation of the Qur’aan by Abdullah Yusuf Ali, new revised edition, 1989, published by Amana Corporation, Maryland, USA.
The challenge of the Qur’aan, is to produce a single Soorah (chapter) like the Soorahs it contains. The same challenge is repeated in the Qur’aan several times. The challenge to produce a Soorah, which, in beauty, eloquence, depth and meaning is at least somewhat similar to a Qur’aanic Soorah remains unmet to this day. A modern rational man, however, would never accept a religious scripture, which says, in the best possible poetic language, that the world is flat. This is because we live in an age, where human reason, logic and science are given primacy. Not many would accept the Qur’aan’s extraordinarily beautiful language, as proof of its Divine origin. Any scripture claiming to be a divine revelation must also be acceptable on the strength of its own reason and logic.
According to the famous physicist and Nobel Prize winner, Albert Einstein, “Science without religion is lame. Religion without science is blind.”
Let us therefore study the Qur’aan, and analyze whether The Qur’aan and Modern Science are compatible or incompatible?
The Qur’aan is not a book of science but a book of ‘signs’, i.e.

ayats. There are more than six thousand ‘signs’ in the Qur’aan of which more than a thousand deal with science. We all know that many a times Science takes a ‘U-turn’. In this book I have considered only established scientific facts and not mere hypotheses and theories that are based on assumptions and are not backed by proof.

Do you think the national media will obsess on this vicious crime ala the Trayvon Martin incident? Gotta love that the savage had already stabbed a person 3 times in the back and was not only out of prison but still in the country.

http://www.yankton.net/articles/2012/05/23/ap-state-sd/us_north_dakota_four_dead.txt
"A Somali man charged in the fatal shooting of a 19-year-old woman in northwest North Dakota is now accused of killing her mother, brother and the mother's boyfriend, who were found dead the same day in mobile home across town.

Omar Mohamed Kalmio, 27, who has a history of violent crime, was charged with murder several months after his infant daughter's mother, Sabrina Zephier, was found dead at her home in Minot in January 2011. The baby was found in the home unharmed.

Court documents show prosecutors filed additional murder charges Friday, alleging Kalmio also was the gunman who killed 13-year-old Dylan Zephier, 38-year-old Jolene Zephier, and Jolene's 22-year-old boyfriend, Jeremy Longie.

Multiple slayings are virtually unheard of in North Dakota, which had 10 murders and non-negligent homicides in all of 2010, according to data compiled by the FBI.

Ward County State's Attorney Roza Larson declined to comment on specifics of the case Wednesday, but she cited the ongoing work by Minot police and the state Bureau of Criminal Investigation. Police also declined comment.

"They have been working this case since the murders occurred and they have been putting in a lot of tireless hours," she said. "A lot of times when things take a while, people have the perception that investigators aren't doing anything. They truly have been doing a lot."

Kalmio, who has pleaded not guilty in Sabrina Zephier's death, is being held without bond. His trial was scheduled to begin June 4, but was cancelled when the new charges were filed. His court-appointed attorney couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday; a recorded phone message said his mailbox was full.

Kalmio was arrested last August at the Grand Forks County jail, where he had been held since February 2011 on an unrelated charge. Police have said that last summer's devastating flooding in Minot may have delayed his arrest, because police had to divert their efforts elsewhere.

The Somali national has said he was in the U.S. under political asylum. He's scheduled for a preliminary hearing June 19, and Larson said she expects the case to go to trial.

Sabrina Zephier's body was found in an apartment on Jan. 28, 2011, the same day the bodies of the other three were found in a nearby mobile home. They all had been shot.

The Zephiers were members of South Dakota's Yankton Sioux Tribe.

Police contend in court documents that a witness claimed Kalmio and Zephier argued days before she was found dead, and Kalmio's co-workers at an oil rig site near Williston claimed Kalmio had made statements about Zephier purposely getting pregnant and ruining his life. Kalmio also allegedly described injuries to Zephier that had not been publicly disclosed, authorities said.

Kalmio was convicted in 2006 of second-degree assault with a dangerous weapon and sentenced to about a year in prison. He and a group of other Somali men were accused of attacking a man in Minneapolis in January 2006, and Kalmio stabbed him three times in the back with a knife. Kalmio also was convicted of theft in 2006, and ordered to pay a fine."

Associated Press writer Blake Nicholson in Bismarck contributed to this story.

It's normal for half of the lights to be out anyway. The system was built in 1894.

Only thing is - the traffic lights are powered by the Lighting Dept. I guess it won't hurt to turn those off too. No one pays attention to

I can hear someone knocking on the door,
There are voices in the street,
And the sound of running feet,
And they whisper the word - "Revolution!"

If I was a younger man I'd see Detroit as a place with killer potential and would probably move there. It could be rebuilt as a 21st century

Liberty Net: May 19, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

SELDOM DOES ONE get a chance to directly participate in significant dialogue and debate about the future of our civilization with truly aware and articulate men and women in todayï¿½s world. Most every ï¿½public debateï¿½ is carefully and expertly controlled to prevent you from thinking along channels not approved in advance by the oligarchs. But the weekly uncensored Liberty Net is a shining exception.

Here are some of the ideas brought forth during this weekï¿½s session:

ï¿½ The demise of Eastman Kodak ï¿½ what is left of its corpse is now firmly in Chinese hands ï¿½ is symptomatic of the looting of American manufacturing assets by Wall Street, usurers, and foreign interests. (8 minutes)

ï¿½ Vic, W1WCR, the Net Control Station for the Liberty Net, was a regular correspondent of radio innovator Harold Beverage, who not only heard the Titanicï¿½s distress call 100 years ago and invented the Beverage antenna, but whose ability to mathematically analyze antenna systems in the days before computers was nothing short of amazing. (10 minutes)

ï¿½ If the Washington regimeï¿½s figurehead ï¿½presidentï¿½ wasnï¿½t born in Kenya, why did he tell his literary agent that was? ï¿½ and why did he allow that published information to stand uncorrected for over 20 years? (22 minutes)

ï¿½ The evidence of Obamaï¿½s birth documentation being forged is so strong that there is a good chance that he will be thrown off the ballot in at least one state. (30 minutes)

ï¿½ The protagonist in the science fiction novel, The Power, has the chameleon-like and Obama-like ability to assume different personae whenever necessary to advance his career. Many high-level figureheads who manage the regime for the oligarchs are like this, and are in reality fake, soulless, manufactured personalities, created and groomed by the billionairesï¿½ intelligence agencies for the purpose of engineering consent for their rule. (34 minutes)

ï¿½ Why would the bankers support the endless inflation of the money supply as they do? Doesnï¿½t that mean that their loans will be paid back in inflated, relatively worthless dollars? The answer is this:

They no longer care about being ï¿½paid back.ï¿½ Thatï¿½s irrelevant. What they want is simply to be paid forever, by everyone ï¿½ and thatï¿½s exactly what the current crooked banking system allows them to do. (1 hour 6 minutes)

ï¿½ The politicians are bound to the existing banking system by fetters of payoffs, debt, and corruption. Until this changes radically and absolutely, nothing can be done to stop our decline. (1 hour 47 minutes)

ï¿½ The Argentine and Russian people both suffered the kind of currency collapse that we appear to be headed for ï¿½ and they survived by intelligently resorting to barter and debt-free money. However, they had the great advantage that ï¿½ unlike us ï¿½ they did not suffer much from the diseases of multiculturalism and multiracialism. The Washington regime refuses to consider debt-free trade as a solution: Their solution is to build massive internment camps. (1 hour 50 minutes)

You can find the Liberty Net on 75 meters, almost always somewhere between 3950 and 3999 kHz SSB, every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. Please check in, and also listen and interact live on the Internet every week ï¿½ see the two ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site. The full audio files are usually posted to our archive on the Sunday morning following the net ï¿½ youï¿½ll always see the latest file near the top of the right column ï¿½ just click to listen or download.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net for over three decades!

There have been some recent questions as to whether this should be referred to as "Radio Tanzania Zanzibar" or "Zanzibar Broadcasting Corporation", but with today's recognition of the female announcer mentioning "ZBC" I guess in future
I'll change my description from "RTZ" to "ZBC".

So yessss ... by popular demand of about 750 million shortwave listeners worldwide we are taking resumes for Proclaimer of The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net. Nobody wants to miss out on thought provoking discussions of

That's right, SWL-ers. Tonight is the night. In honor of Memorial Day Weekend, The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net will be discussing

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

And it starts in about 12 minutes - just long enough to whip up a batch of Orville Redenbacher's and crack open a big, frosty 2-liter bottle of co-cola and settle in for an exciting evening by the old shortwave receiver.

Oh yes - the thing about Y-Man and Barney - it's true. Or so we heard.

My toenails are in terrible shape,,, you know what I mean? They curl up like 'that'. I have to use wire cutter dikes to cut them. A woman who retired from a hospital (she was an operating room nurse) in Arlington, Texas once told me to soften my toenails in soap to make it easier for me to trim them.

hi,

Miracles in the holy Quran :CREATION OF THE UNIVERSE: ‘THE BIG BANG’

The creation of the universe is explained by astrophysicists in a widely accepted phenomenon, popularly known as the ‘Big Bang’. It is supported by observational and experimental data gathered by astronomers and astrophysicists for decades. According to the ‘Big Bang’, the whole universe was initially one big mass (Primary Nebula). Then there was a ‘Big Bang’ (Secondary Separation) which resulted in the formation of Galaxies. These then divided to form stars, planets, the sun, the moon, etc. The origin of the universe was unique and the probability of it occurring by ‘chance’ is zero.
The Qur’aan contains the following verse, regarding the origin of the universe: “Do not the Unbelievers see That the heavens and the earth Were joined together (as one Unit of Creation), before We clove them asunder?” [Al-Qur’aan 21:30]
The striking congruence between the Qur’aanic verse and the ‘Big Bang’ is inescapable!
How could a book, which first appeared in the deserts of Arabia 1400 years ago, contain this profound scientific truth?

Did my good deed for the day. Gave a critter another chance at life.

Had a young groundhog that decided once again that living under my shed was a good idea.

Set the live trap last night with some lettuce in it, and this afternoon it took the bait.

It was pretty calm, and I took it on a nice ride about 7 miles away.

Let it go right near a small lake. The critter doesn't realize what that real-estate goes for.

Nice job!

However, next time you do something like this, you probably want to go further than 7 miles -- or you may get a return visit.

Quite a few years ago I live trapped some chipmunks and took them 4 or 5 miles away. Later, when talking to the Dept. of Natural Resources, they claim these critters have quite a homing instinct and should be taken 20-25 miles away. Your mileage with groundhogs may (or may not) vary.

P.S.

I don't understand your statement "Gave a critter another chance at life." Would you have killed it if it stayed? A pet dog that would have attacked it? The shed would collapse on it? We still have chipmunks, squirrels, raccoons and rabbits and I've decided that we can peacefully co-exist.

Very commendable. You will be recompensed ten fold for your compassion. Karma is a razor sharp two edged sword that rewards the good and humbles the bad. Unfortunately the fellow in Mississippi will soon find this out.

By the by, don't worry about Chip returning, you took them plenty of distance away. Good grief there is a critic in every group.

We have a retinue of yard critters too - possums, squirrels (aerial and subterranean), raccoons, skunks, and many bird types (even had some cedar waxwings the other day, a first here), and we think they contribute enormously to the ambiance. Fox, coyotes, bobcats, various snakes, treefrogs, etc. nearby. I wish we loved where megafauna (Bison, Grizzlies, Wolves, Moose, etc) live - they are truly inspiring to have around.

How appropriate. Both are fascist states devoid of honor or respect for human rights. They now can "talk shop" on how to best implement the genocide of their respective "problems" - the Tibetans and Uyghurs for the Chinese and the Palestinians for the Israelis.

"Gen. Chen Bingde, China's equivalent to the U.S. Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, met Monday with his Israeli counterpart Lt.
Gen. Benny Gantz to discuss expanding military ties, including a training mission to Israel for Chinese paramilitary forces that police restive regions populated by ethnic Tibetans and Muslim Uyghurs."

Not only do they have all that and a bag of chips in common - they both are actively engaged in ripping off the citizens of United States of America and share the common goal of ultimately destroying us.

Small wonder the Jews refer to us as "dumb cattle". The irony is simply unbearable.

Never forget, never forget.

From their website: http://www.gtr5.com/

"On June 8, 1967, US Navy intelligence ship USS Liberty was suddenly and brutally attacked on the high seas in international waters by the air and naval forces of Israel. The Israeli forces attacked with full knowledge that this was an American ship and lied about it. Survivors have been forbidden for 40 years to tell their story under oath to the American public. The USS Liberty Memorial web site tells their story and is dedicated to the memory of the 34 brave men who died."

The Attack

After surveilling USS Liberty for more than nine hours with almost hourly aircraft overflights and radar tracking, the air and naval forces of Israel attacked our ship in international waters without warning. USS Liberty was identified as a US naval ship by Israeli reconnaissance aircraft nine hours before the attack and continuously tracked by Israeli radar and aircraft thereafter. Sailing in international waters at less than five knots, with no offensive armament, our ship was not a military threat to anyone.

The Israeli forces attacked without warning and without attempting to contact us. Thirty four Americans were killed in the attack and another 174 were wounded. The ship, a $40-million dollar state-of-the-art signals intelligence platform, was later declared unsalvageable and sold for scrap.

The Cover Up

Despite a near-universal consensus that the Israeli attack was made with full knowledge that USS Liberty was a US Navy ship, the Johnson administration began an immediate cover-up of this fact. Though administration officers continued individually to characterize the attack as deliberate, the Johnson administration never sought the prosecution of the guilty parties or otherwise attempted to seek justice for the victims. They concealed and altered evidence in their effort to downplay the attack. Though they never formally accepted the Israeli explanation that it was an accident, they never pressed for a full investigation either. They simply allowed those responsible literally to get away with murder.

In an ongoing effort to reveal the truth about the attack, the USS Liberty Veterans Association has filed with the Secretary of the Army in the manner prescribed by law a detailed, fully documented Report of War Crimes describing the circumstances of the attack on our ship and evidence that it was a crime under international law. In accordance with international law and treaties, the United States is obligated to investigate the allegations. So far, the United States has declined even to acknowledge that the report has been filed."

SHANGHAI (Reuters) - JPMorgan Chase & Co (NYS:JPM - News) has injected 2.5 billion yuan ($394.08 million) into its China unit, the latest foreign bank to beef up its Chinese operations.

Foreign banks, including HSBC (LSE:HSBA.L - News) and Singapore's DBS Group (SES:D05.SI - News), have either injected or are planning to pump in capital into their China units which are expected to grow rapidly over the coming years even as growth in the world's second-biggest economy comes off the boil.

"The additional capital will better position the bank in the evolving regulatory environment and cement our commitment to clients in China," Zili Shao, Chairman and chief executive of J.P. Morgan China, said in a statement on Monday.

"The capital will be used to expand the bank's branch network, develop products, increase corporate lending, and recruit employees," Shao added.

The injection brings the registered capital of the locally incorporated unit to 6.5 billion yuan.

The local unit, which conducts commercial banking businesses in China, has also received regulatory approval to open its 7th branch in China in Suzhou, west of Shanghai, the statement said.

JPMorgan has a separate investment banking joint venture in China.

HSBC <0005.HK> injected 2.8 billion yuan into its China unit last year, even as it laid off several hundred investment bankers in London, Hong Kong and elsewhere as part of its jobs cull to save billions of dollars.

DBS, Southeast Asia's largest bank, said in April it is planning to make an injection of 2.3 billion yuan into its China unit to increase its network and staff, and upgrade infrastructure and other technology platforms.

"Public schools in Jackson, Miss., will no longer be allowed to handcuff students to poles or other objects, under a settlement with the Southern Poverty Law Center reached in U.S. District Court.

Jody Owens, director of the Mississippi office of the Southern Poverty Law Center, said the Capital City Alternatives school in Mississippi's largest district must immediately stop handcuffing students, a practice used to punish even such things as dress-code violations.

"The focus should be education, not incarceration and it's tantamount to child abuse when children are handcuffed to railings for something as simple as not having the appropriate belt or inappropriate shoe strings," Owens said.

What is the Golden Come-Along Award?

The Golden Come-Along Award is given to that individual who has been deemed to have had his/her head stuck so far up their ass during the previous year that it would require the assistance of a come-along to pull it out.

Do you wish to place "Truth Teller" into contention for the coveted Award?

When I was stationed briefly at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, the USS Iowa was mothballed there pierside in the Delaware River.

We used to sneak on board the vessel with flashlights for our tours.

Quite an impressive ship. Damn big gun turrets (16 inch guns).

If you get a chance, visit it, and remember my nighttime forays in its many passageways.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
21 - 27 May 2012

Solar activity was very low to low during the period. An impressive CME was observed from a region beyond the west limb late on 26 May. Associated with this non-Earth-directed CME were Type II (estimated shock velocity 751 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps as well as a greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit. There were five regions numbered during the period with Region 1492 (S14, L=281, class/area Eao/190, on 27 May) being one of the largest and most active. This region produced six C-class flares, including a long duration C3/Sf flare at 27/0552Z associated with a non-Earth-directed CME observed off the southeast limb in LASCO C2/C3 imagery.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event was observed at geosynchronous orbit on 27 May. The event began at 27/0535 UTC, reached a peak of 14 pfu at 27/1045 UTC, and ended at 27/1235 UTC. This event was associated with the CME observed beyond the west limb.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit reached high levels during 24 - 27 May.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to minor storm levels during the period. Mostly quiet levels occurred on 21 May. Activity increased to quiet to active levels on 22 May. A further increase to quiet to minor storm levels occurred on 23 May. Activity decreased to quiet to unsettled levels during 24 - 25 May with brief active to minor storm periods at high latitudes. Mostly quiet levels occurred during 26 - 27 May. The increased activity during 22 - 25 May was associated with a recurrent coronal hole high-speed stream (CH HSS). ACE solar wind data indicated a co-rotating interaction region (CIR) on 22 May in advance of the CH HSS. Associated with the CIR were increased IMF Bt (peak 14 nT) and intermittent periods of southward IMF Bz (maximum deflections to -11 nT). The CH HSS commenced on 23 May as wind speeds increased to around 700 km/s. The CH HSS began to gradually subside on 24 May.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
28 May - 23 June 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels during the period with a chance for M-class activity during 30 May through 13 June due to the return of old Region 1476 (N10, L=180, class/area Fkc/1050 on 09 May).

A chance for a greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit exists from 30 May through 13 June due to the return of old Region 1476.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to reach high levels during 28 - 29 May, 06 - 12 June, and 20 - 23 June in response to recurrent CH HSS effects. Normal to moderate levels are expected during the rest of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet to unsettled levels during most of the period. There is a chance for isolated active periods during 4 - 5 June and again during 18 - 19 June due to recurrent CH HSS effects.

Caught another small groundhog in the same spot a bit ago.

Now reunited with its brother/sister/spouse in the same location.

Mississippi isn't broke. You want to see broke? Look at California and Illinois, a lot of States and Cities are broke. There are some cracks in the parking lot of the Walmart store in Clinton, Missy Sippy because of that Yazoo clay in the ground. Those cracks will soon be fixed. If you wants to check out those cracks five miles West of doggy's couch? http://www.wapt.com I am fixin to step into doggy's back yard now and sling some more water on my new grass I planted back there about two week ago. Those grass seeds are growing real Good. I water them three times every day.

Back in the 1950s, sometimes I would go down town to Hughe's news store that used to be on Capitol Street. I would buy a Coca Cola and a bag of Planters peanuts and put the peanuts in the Coca Cola and play the pinball machines. Those were Good old days.

Director Dennis Michael Lynch wanted to capture the truth about illegal immigration. What he created was a film so powerful that 35 film festivals decided it was too politically incorrect to be shown.

Audiences that have had the rare chance to see it have fallen in love with this film. So has our staff ... and reviewers, too! Here's what legendary radio host Barry Farber said:

“Everyone lights a fire in some way, but Dennis Michael Lynch is a volcano. The best movie about illegal immigration Americans have ever been treated to. This can change things!"

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan

"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

LIBERAL FASCISM, Marxism, National Socialism [NAZI] and Juche [N.Korea] are left-wing brothers:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fa1sj0gwnuQ

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

[...]

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... They subjected the working classes to a rigorous discipline... As soon as they were firmly established, the dictators began to limit profit, impose capital levies, and regulate business in great detail...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Here are the Three (3) Phases of Liberal Decay into Fascism:

1. Liberalism (Well Meaning, Nice Sounding, "Do-Gooder" Policies Always Doomed to Fail)

2. Liberal-Progressivism (The Drive for Social Improvement through Change and Promising Hope;
More Draconian Liberal Polices are Implemented to Transform The People into a New Society that Is Guided by 'The Party') The Party Elite Have Complete Power and Rule Un-Checked.

3. Liberal-Fascism (The Rise of the Party Leader over 'The Party' Ensuring the Unity and Uniformaty of 'The Party' and Enforcing The Will of 'The Party' Over the People.) The Party Leader will Cleanse
'The Party' of All those Who Are NOT of 'The Party'; and 'The Party' Will Cleanse the People of All Those Who Do NOT Support 'The Party' and The Party Leader. The Party Leader Now Has Complete and Total Power and Rules by the Force of His Iron Will.

Brother/Sister Are You "OF" 'The Party' ?

Does The Teaching Of 'The Party' Abide Within You ?

Does The Thoughts Of 'The Party' "Leader" Guide Your Thoughts ?

Let 'The Party' Change Your Life and Transform You !

Let 'The Party' Give You Hope and Renew You !

When you vote cut them off at the knees from your Tax Dollars.

billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008 FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

Changes preceded by "|".

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because
| DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including
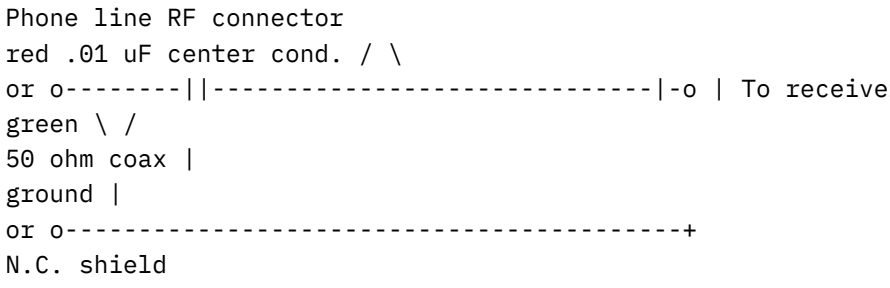
| ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

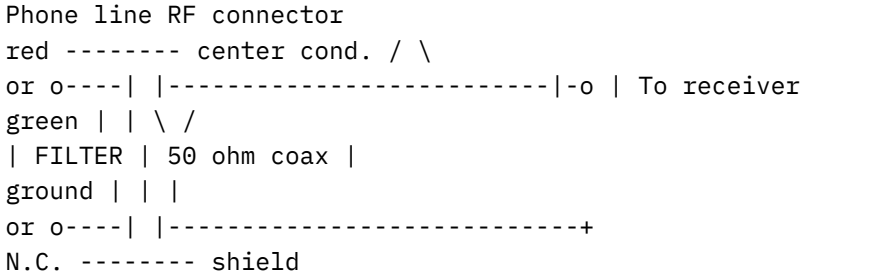
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good
| performance, are well-built and affordable:
|
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
|
| Model 182A beverage matching unit
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/reconly.html#Beverage Matching

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

From: johns@uhunix.uhcc.Hawaii.Edu (John Shalamskas)
Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Parts for the filters can be obtained from the following source:

Yesteryday I went to the Animal Health Products store to buy some Bayer Advantage II and Heartguard for doggy. No problem with the Bayer stuff, bit the guy told me govt is cracking down on Heartguard. It has been over a year since doggy had a blood test. So, at 11:15 AM this morning doggy has an appointment at Animal Medical Center (Animal Medical Center and Animal Health Products are in the same building) for a blood test so I can get a prescription to buy Heartguard. I have been buying Heartguard for ten years ever since doggy was an eight weeks old puppy, I always had to sign a certain paper for the Heartguard.I call it Follow The Money, commie govt is bound to be getting a cut of that blood test money!, about $26.00.

It seems when I listen to shortwave now days on my little Grundig 400 Yacht Boy, there is very little on. I'm wondering what you think will become of SW. Will countries someday start broadcasting more and more? Will the freqs go to some other high tech device or will it just be religious broadcasts and the radical guys that keep telling us that the guys in Washington and Brussels are going to lock us up? I used to hope for a really nice SW radio someday, but now you have to hunt for an English broadcast and then it only lasts for a hour or so. With the European nations backrupt, I doubt they will be spending money on radio in the near future. What do you say?

"Dozens of previously dismissed radio signals were actually credible transmissions from Amelia Earhart, according to a new study of the alleged post-loss signals from Earhart's plane."

Some of the signals thought by these researchers to be valid were heard by both commercial and amateur radio operators.

All of the Scandinavian nations have gone off the air in the last ten years. Radio Canada dies this month. Radio Nederland just announced the end of SW broadcasts at the end of June. Many African transmitters have gone silent, although some remain (many religious relays). Radio Prague, Radio Bulgaria, RAI Italy, Radio Portugal, DW transmitters at many locations, and several BBC transmitters have bit the dust. Kazakhstan just shut down its relay station. Latin Americans are still numerous, but much less than they once were. Voice of Russia and China Radio International remain strong, as does All India Radio. CRI in particular seems to flood the bands with redundant transmissions around the clock.

Unless you are interested in tiny flea-powered stations that speak in strange tongues, the future of SW radio lies, I think, in religious broadcasters who have $$$ to burn and continue to use to use strong transmitters around the world for relays. Either that, or China on every other channel.

With multiple distribution channels on the rise, and radio as a whole becoming less important, what with internet, satellite delivery, and smartphone apps becoming widely available, with dramatically better sound quality possible than SW, there is little means of justifying the operating costs to bean counters overseeing SW radio budgets.

There was a great deal of discussion on this group when BBC discontinued SW to North America, orphaning more than a million listeners in a single stroke. But the decision was made on several fronts. First was cost. It takes a lot to operate a SW outlet with multiple frequencies, antenna and transmiter operations, in order to reach and cover a single target with ongoing SW support. Then, there was the question about who was actually listening. Mr Byford, Mangling Director of the World Service at the time, said he no longer was interested in broadcasting to hobbyists. Rather, he wanted to serve, and these are his words, 'decision makers and opinion formers.' In other words, politics was involved in the decision to take SW off line in favor of other outlets with more politically useful listener numbers. Third, there were already alternative media carrying BBC WS. the fact that in some major outlets, the only BBC WS content was a few 5 minute newscasts between 2a and 6a didn't matter. It was the right political outlet reaching 'decision makers and opinion formers.' And, thus, met the desired criteria.

And then, there was the budgetary line item that allowed Mr Byford, himself, to keep as a bonus, monies not spent.

So, BBC WS programming left shortwave for North America.

Similar scenarios have developed around the world. Often without any actual viable outlet for the broadcaster in question in the region no longer being served. No matter. Any excuse will do when you need an excuse.

But, here, a decade later, there are some interesting and useful developments. Web based audio is better, and distribution is more reliable. Meaning, unlike the days when SW to North America was just terminated, BBC Website distribution actually works. Some of it doesn't sound too bad, either.

World Radio Network on SiriusXM offers a good deal of compelling content throughout the day, with BBC, DW, RNW and many others represented.

Cellphone apps like Tuned-In offer a good deal of content formerly on SW. I listen to "Dr Who' on BBC 4, for instance, on my iPhone every evening at 6:30, from my location near Chicago. It's good quality, stereo sound, and there's no buzzes, noise, dropouts, or fading distortion. I can also record, for later, or go through archives of previous shows at will. Similarly, other former SW broadcasters are reaching audiences through smartphone apps.

So, there are options, now. And most of them actually work.

But that doesn't mean that there is no downside to this new technology. Or that SW doesn't still have a place. Though expensive, SW reached a worldwide audience without limitation by international boundary, censorship, or third party carriage. Radio waves know nothing of these things. And while cellphone apps, and internet content can be censored, or switched off at will by a third party with a political axe to grind, radio waves must be jammed with equally expensive and powerful systems, that are only marginally effective. Radio requires no cables, no monthly fees, or subscription registry. And radio works when nearly everything else doesn't. Ask any ham.

Looking at a bigger picture, with the world becoming an evermore dangerous place, and the need for nations to make their first best pitch effective and compelling in the face of political opposition, or conflict, SW may be the only option when the international community finally throws in the towel and begins to return to sovereign nations, with each its own agenda, and its own international needs, and its own international message to get out. In that context, SW will be, again, an invaluable resource in putting a face on a nation's politics.

Don't expect it anytime soon. But the threat of international conflict grows daily. And remember that SW grew out of world war. If it happens, again, you'll be glad you hung on to your Drakes, your ICOM's and your AOR's. Because that may be the only source of news and information available. Politicized, though it may be.

I say what I've said for quite awhile:

If you like the magic of radio, want to capture a "rare" country, enjoy surfing the bands, then shortwave is the answer.

If you want to listen to actual content then internet radio is your answer.

If you love the nuts and bolts a utility station is as good as an HFBC.
Personally, I'm more impressed with a QSL for a 5 Watt digital contact than a hundred for an AM station with thousands of Watts. SWLers are welcome in the new world of digital hams.

Good luck with that on the West Coast. We get China and Russia fairly well. R. Habana is the only HFBC station I still listen to for the music (it makes the Lowe sound pretty). BBC East Asia on 9740 works for morning news on a campout.

Hello,

Have a WinRadio Excalibur, and have just gotten a new iPad.
Lots of fun.

I do hf listening only up to 30 MHz; no transmitting.
Just the listening.

Have just about given up with the digital "stuff" as I've never been able to successfully do it.

Anyway, I've looked, but could not find any.

Are there any Sw radio Apps for the iPad that you folks know of, and possibly use ?
Quite a few for picking up the scanner freqs but could not find any for sw usage.

Thanks,
Bob

One thing that might revitalize shortwave would be to lower the barriers to becoming a shortwave broadcaster: Allow low-power broadcasting on certain bands, with entry requirements no harder than amateur radio's.

In these days of high-quality FM, 7.1 digital sound, and 192k Internet streaming, the big media outlets can't credibly argue that a static-ridden 1 kW AM HF broadcast signal is "serious competition" for them.

But allowing such signals _could_ provide an outlet for music and ideas ignored by said big media, a way to foster freedom of speech for those without massive amounts of capital, and an impetus for many new small businesses selling transmitters, et cetera -- and could also spark a renaissance in the medium and hobby we love.

I'd suggest we start with daytime allocations on the 49 meter band and 24-hour allocations on selected band segments above 15 MHz.
Forty-nine meters is almost totally empty during the hours of sunshine in North America, but it can support coverage areas of half a continent or so -- as the low power Canadian stations have proved.

Many of the higher HFBC bands also have wide swaths sans signals even when propagation is excellent. (There's also a lot of space in the 60, 90, and 120 meter areas going virtually unused these days, day or night.)

I'd say make the maximum power 1,000 Watts and keep it a hobby broadcasting service and a "for-the-love-of-radio-and-free-speech" broadcasting service: totally non-commercial except maybe for NPR-type sponsorship announcements once or twice an hour. That should be enough to keep the money-men uninterested.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

To governments the most important aspect of forcing internet use on us instead of radio is their ability to see who is reading/writing what.
The IP addresses accompany everything you send or receive, providing them with your electronic fingerprint on EVERYTHING you touch.

I'm now waiting for email addresses and permanent internet identities to be assigned at birth. Kinda like the electronic equivalent of being tattooed on the forehead (like they do in Holland MI).

Liberty Net: May 26, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THERE WERE A FEW feeble attempts to jam the Liberty Net in the last few weeks, but they were almost totally ineffective. Itï¿½s rather hard to wipe out a net that uses multiple antenna sites and multiple Internet audio streams ï¿½ streams on which, by the way, several participants are streamed direct from their microphones to your speakers, making jamming impossible. The Internet adjuncts to the Liberty Net have also helped us zero in on jammers and silence them simply by determining their locations.

Here are some of the ideas brought forth during this weekï¿½s session:

ï¿½ The Secretary of State of Arizona recently requested a birth certificate from Hawaii for the billionairesï¿½ figurehead ï¿½Barack Hussein Obama.ï¿½ The result? Now there is yet a third suspicious and contradictory document to supplement the existing obvious forgeries. This time, thereï¿½s not even a pretense of it being an actual birth certificate ï¿½ itï¿½s simply a letter from an obscure official. (12 minutes)

ï¿½ Why do European-Americans hate themselves so much that they willingly facilitate their own extinction? It has gone so far that Whites with no ï¿½ or an undetectable trace of ï¿½ Amerindian ancestry are claiming to be ï¿½Indians.ï¿½ (26 minutes)

ï¿½ What is the meaning of Russiaï¿½s move to establish ï¿½international rulesï¿½ for ï¿½cyberspace behaviorï¿½? Are such rules intended to control the individualï¿½s access to information, as in China? Or is Putin being used by the corporations to implement something like SOPA without needing Congressional approval? Or is this Putinï¿½s attempt to limit the power of billionaires like George Soros and his ilk, whose phony ï¿½color revolutionsï¿½ utilize social media, leveraged by huge money inflows and intelligence agency disinformation and dirty tricks? (38 minutes)

ï¿½ The cable giant Comcast has applied for a patent on a device that will force you to watch commercials when you attempt to skip them using your DVR. (44 minutes)

ï¿½ The race and culture that gave us the Green Party has now given us the Pirate Party ï¿½ now officially recognized both as a political party (with seats in the European Parliament) and as a religion ï¿½ which takes a principled, radical stand for total Internet freedom. Some have even suggested a new Internet be established totally outside the clutches of governments and corporations. (50 minutes)

ï¿½ The billionairesï¿½ media often have explicit policies forbidding reporters from mentioning the racial backgrounds of attackers and victims in cases of non-White crime against White people. But in the extremely rare cases when the races are reversed, the races are not only mentioned ï¿½ they are emphasized nearly to the point of hysteria. The goal: genocide of Whites. (1 hour 6 minutes)

ï¿½ Revolution is coming; count on it. Would you rather have it be violent, like the one our rulers in Washington are preparing for with their construction of gigantic internment camps and their mass purchases of ammunition and caskets? ï¿½ or would you rather have a peaceful one like Icelandï¿½s, where the people exercised their will before it was too late and simply refused to pay the bankers? (1 hour 20 minutes)

ï¿½ When ï¿½peace broke outï¿½ after the fall of the Soviet Union, the military-industrial-banking complex was in a state of terror because we might have had to stop spending so much money on killing. You see, we didnï¿½t have an enemy anymore. Into that vacuum, Zionist manipulators injected the phony ï¿½terror threatï¿½ and brought about our endless wars supporting Israeli hegemony in the Middle East. (1 hour 26 minutes)

The Liberty Net is a gathering that includes thoughtful, philosophical minds and well-informed sources every week, and any amateur operator can join in the discussion and debate. A big ï¿½thank youï¿½ to W1WCR for his hard work which makes the Liberty Net possible. You can download an mp3 recording of the Net right here at http://3950.net and listen in your gym, or on your way to work, or anywhere you choose.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZBsR8cN-FpI

If it does you have heard a jammer. The most prolific user of this type of jammer is Vietnam, but North Korea also uses a similar one fairly often. Other users exist, but those two are the most frequent.

At that freq, 12180 kHz, I do not know who they might be trying to jam. The Sound of Hope does use 12175 kHz, but not at that time, 1415z. Also, the Chinese normally hit Sound of Hope with the Firedrake jammer, and that does not sound like a siren. Again to support the Vietnamese jammer I often see it pop up on fairly random frequencies, often with no station under it being jammed.

Take a look at Blackcat Systems. They have several that address specific digital transmissions, although no one program that does many of them.

But, if you want to address the majority of the digital signals out there you are pretty much going to need a PC, not an iPad. Even then you will need multiple programs to get the majority of signals. Even with very high end software there are still some holes in the coverage. And no matter what you get some, even many, signals will be encrypted, and not decodable. So there are always going to be some things you just can not decode.
